LOVE'S FIRST KISS.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER, BY NATHAN D. URNER.

Ah, who can analyze a kiss,
  You ask, and reckon rightly
The relative degrees of bliss
  Which it imparts so lightly?
I know not, but I think the first
  You gave me, when declaring
Your passion's power assuaged a thirst
  In me beyond comparing.

I but recall a fainting sense,
  As though some flower inhaling
Of sweet, delicious poison, whence
  I reeled, with blushes paling,
And then I melted on your breast,
  Your arms around me straining,
And, eager breath by breath caressed,
  Your lips my spirit straining.

Ah'! though we two have wedded been
  A'year, and baby yonder
Crows from his crib, that kiss serene
  With time grows but the fonder;
It is the unmatched pearl of price
  In Love's ethereal casket
Of keepsake jewels, hoarded nice
  Till recollections ask it.

t first, when that bee-kiss was at
  My lips' fresh petals sipping,
While heart to heart beat pit-a-pat,
  My soul seemed from me slipping;
Then all my frame with subtle thrills
  Responded, heaven drew nearer,
My heart burst into fountain-rills
  For you, my desert-cheerer!

And then the sense of rest which comes
  Of dreams fulfilled succeeded;
I felt you all my own, nor crumbs
  Of further comfort needed.
O Love! that first kiss stands apar
  Which I can ne'er repay you;
But, since 'tis treasured in my heart,
  Kiss, kiss again, I pray you!

THE HEADLESS ENDYMION.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER, BY JAMES WIGHT.

"Alas! they had been friends in youth."—COLERIDGE.

Six evenings and one afternoon every week, for fourteen weeks, in every kind of weather, the boy and the girl left a tenement-house on the East-side and trudged up to a theatre on Broadway, where they appeared as children in the first act of a morbidly-emotional drama, adapted from the French, which ran for a hundred nights to splendid business. The curtain rose on a harrowing domestic scene in which a husband, in presence of their two children, accused his wife of unfaithfulness. The husband would listen to nothing. He banished her, with curses, from his blighted hearth. The boy ran away from his home to share the fortunes of his mother, but the girl clung to the infuriated father, and evinced no feeling in the parting tableau with her mother. As the unhappy woman vanished from the stage, she turned and addressed her daughter:

"Hard-hearted—inexorable as your father!" she cried; "may your fate be more fortunate than mine! May you find forgiveness when you seek forgiveness!"

When children of twelve or thirteen are introduced into the cast of a play the plastic state of their mind is overlooked, and they are generally regarded by actors and audience as more or less "smart" or "cunning" marionettes. In the present case, the moral influence of the boy Gideon Day's "lines" sank deep into his soul and elevated the tone of his nature. He grew more thoughtful, became kinder to his mother, more chivalrous, more industrious. The girl, Avice Fair, was a reddish haired girl of thirteen, with dark brown eyes and a lean frock. She was tall of her age, and her mother—a widow—cut, clipped, washed, altered, darned with great perseverance and ingenuity to render her daughter "presentable," as she phrased it. Never a willing-handed girl, Avice grew more lazy and selfish after she was engaged at the theatre. Gideon Day, although a year younger, saw this, and was accustomed to remonstrate with his companion in their walks to and from the theatre. Sometimes Avice lost her temper and threatened to administer Gid "a slap over the snout." Whenever they came to high words Gid's little terrier, Towzer, that always accompanied them, would run in front, tail first, barking a noisy disapproval, whereat they would stop and simultaneously begin to pet the affectionate little animal, and harmony would be restored.

One night, when they left the theatre after the second act as usual, Gideon and Avice resumed an angry argument that had occupied most of their way uptown. The girl had been shockingly rebellious and unfeeling towards her mother, and had kicked Towzer into the bargain.

"You are a real cruel girl, Avice, and you know you are," said Gid in a tone of sorrowful remonstrance; "and if you don't stop I'll get another girl."

"You're a sassy little skunk!" Avice rejoined. "Who cares about you! Get another girl! I'm not your girl, anyway!"

Here Towzer ran barking in front, whereupon she kicked the dog, and, being further exasperated by Gid's angry remonstrance, raised her umbrella and chased the frightened creature into the middle of the avenue. A rapidly-driven street-car was approaching at the moment. Towzer darted among the horses' feet. There was a very slight hitch of the wheel; two sharp, agonized yelps, and the little dog had numbered his days. The boy ran and picked up the mangled remains, wrapped them in the evening newspaper he had bought on his way uptown, took the bundle reverently in his arms, and lifted up his voice and wept. Avice preceded him home by five minutes, nor turned her head till the door was reached, when she waited.

Evidently somewhat impressed by the tears Gideon Day shed, there was yet no repentance or grief in the girl's look simply open-eyed wonder, mingled with a dash of contempt and perhaps of triumph.

"It's all your own blame; you oughtn't to have quarreled," she said as he approached.

MISS VERE CAREW, ACTRESS AND VOCALIST.

His only reply was a sob as he passed in and went upstairs to his mother.

From that day until the end of their engagement they never exchanged a word, but became as strangers. Avice Fair was now a young lady with a grievance. She had injured another, and could not forgive him. And so she brooded over Gideon and his defunct dog, and hardened her heart against him, and vowed in her own mind that she would humble him some day if the opportunity offered.

Gideon Day never filled another engagement on the mimetic stage. He returned to school, and studied with rare assiduity, discovering talents that showed him to be a born artist. When he was nineteen his models in clay had attracted so much favorable criticism, that a liberal-minded capitalist advanced money to enable him to pursue his studies in Italy.

Avice Fair obtained another engagement on the stage, and gradually worked her way up to the front rank of the emotional school of actresses. At twenty she held a remunerative position as leading-lady in a London theatre. As she looked at herself in the mirror, she beheld the reflection of a large and handsome woman, with a massive white neck, deep bosom and majestically-rounded shoulders, while the full sweep and outline of her grand figure denoted symmetry and completeness in every curve. The face was not beautiful. Some critics might have pronounced it hardly good-looking; but yet it was such a face as most men have seen—a face that few could have looked on without misgivings that they might only too soon learn to yearn for its smiles, its approval and its love.

Avice Fair stuck to her own name and studied hard. Possessed of boundless ambition, she was also the incarnation of prudence. Neither the incense of flattery nor the protestations of passion could turn her well-balanced head. She had resolved to marry wealth, and she had sworn to be prudent till Crœsus, properly personified, came along.

During the five years which intervened between her twentieth and twenty-fifth years she did not lack honorable proposals, as may be well imagined. But, as the years passed, her ambition became more exacting. She now set her heart on wealth and—a title. The man came to the front at last. He was a Frenchman—the Baron de Sangliere, an old egotist, yet credulous as a child.

The Baron and Baroness de Sangliere were on their nuptial tour in Italy, and had gone to Rome to Winter. While visiting the studios and sauntering through the art-galleries, the Baroness had unexpectedly met Gideon Day, and the dormant memories of a dozen years had been suddenly and unpleasantly waked to life. The boy Gideon Day was now the popular sculptor Signor Gideo, a singularly handsome man, with a palace for a home and half of Rome for a constituency. Although not the faintest evidence of recognition had been manifested on either side, the lady felt that she was not mistaken. And after dinner that day, while her ancient partner dozed, the Baroness paced the boudoir with a somewhat high color on her cheek, an unusual sparkle in her eye, and in a state of unusual mental indecision. Should she order a work of art as some compensation for the slight mishap that had befallen the sculptor as a boy, and of which, in some measure, she had been the secondary cause? It was an absurd incident! It had always appeared exquisitely ridiculous to see a twelve-year-old boy blubbering over his little hairy dog. And the dog's name? Oh, yes; she remembered—Towzer. Yes, that was the name. And now that blubbering little tenement-house fellow had become Signor Gideo, the renowned sculptor! How strange it seemed!

Continuing her musing, she reflected that Signor Gideo did not look like a blubbering personage. Clearly a different sort of a heart had supplanted that of the tearful boy. What sort of a heart was it? It might be an interesting experiment—perhaps an amusing pastime—to probe it. The sorrow of the boy was an emotional treat in its way; might not the mature agony of the man's riven heart be a banquet fit for the gods? Yes; she would speak to the Baron, and Signor Gideo must be patronized.

With Avice, to resolve was to execute. The Baron readily fell in with his wife's proposal. The only question that remained concerned the nature of the order. What was the subject to be? She adroitly introduced the heathen goddesses, and it was finally arranged that Diana, personified by the Baroness, was to engage the sculptor's chisel.

Next day the Baron de Sangliere was confined to his room with an acute attack of his old enemy the gout. Sitting up in bed he penned the following instructions to Signor Gideo, who had signified his willingness to undertake the order:

"I should of course like to have the figure of the Baroness executed as it will best express the charms of personal dignity, elegance of pose and countenance, by which beauty conquers the soul of man. Her loveliness is incomparable; therefore, let inspiration render your statue of my Diana an apotheosis."

The Baroness de Sangliere and Signor Gideo met and discussed the statue, of which he submitted a crayon sketch.

"You don't quite understand me," she said, with a softened expression. "I do not want Diana alone; I want Endymion with her."

The sculptor looked surprised

"You have no doubt read that Diana used to come down from on high to kiss the lips of Endymion while he slept," she said. "I remember having read a lovely description of the beautiful goddess watching over her favorite shepherd and bathing his sleeping form in floods of light and passion as he lay on

" 'A bank, where the wild thyme blows,
  Where ox-lips and the nodding violet grows.'

"If you catch my idea, I want two figures: Endymion asleep in a graceful position on a mossy bank, and Diana bending over him with a passionate, entranced look."

Signor Gideo inquired whom the Baroness had selected to pose for the Endymion.

"Select such a model as you would employ were you about to create an Apollo," she answered. "Leave the features for the present; we will think of the head and face afterwards."

The work was commenced and the posings proceeded day after day. Avice was in that subtle glow of health which assumes a low cream-color that never flushes, but which passion sometimes renders still paler. The artist worked calmly, animated alone by his love of Art—at least, this was his theory.

And the model! Had she analyzed her motives? Alas, the best of us are seldom careful to examine too closely the alembic wherein the matrix of an unworthy action lies hidden. Another motive, more in consonance with our egotism, always lies conveniently near, and may be readily pressed into service to gild the occasion. The Baroness told herself that she was honoring and patronizing the sculptor; her conscience privately informed her that she was submitting the heart of Gideon Day to an inquisitorial torture. She was naturally one of those not uncommon pretty women who delude themselves with the idea that every man they meet would have preferred them to all others, if that preference had not been quite hopeless. She expected—nay, she was confident—that the sculptor would fall madly in love with her; and then? Well, she would have been rather discomfited if pressed to answer that question adequately.

But as day after day passed she began to feel nettled at the coldness of his bearing. Followed by the soft and sympathetic gaze of her glorious eyes, that sometimes melted like moonlight or flickered like an opal, he still remained self-possessed and formally polite. No reference was ever made to the past. Once Avice remarked during a "sitting:"

"I wonder whether Endymion, being a shepherd, had a dog?"

"Writers on mythologic topics are silent on the subject," quoth the artist, glancing at the model, who flashed upon him a glance that might have driven a susceptible man mad, as magic philtres drive men mad.

After this she smiled on him more persistently and softly than ever; for she had observed his facial muscles twitch and his hand momentarily tremble. Still, neither her beauty nor her condescension wrought the wild havoc she had expected with his senses and his reason. Naturally, she began to think that his indifference was assumed. You see, she had piqued and tried to persuade herself that his heart, beneath that calm exterior, was torn and lacerated—that, in a word, he was suffering "the tortures of the damned."

Pique of this kind is one of the hardy perennial plants of the female heart. Many a bitter hour she passed in wrestling with its firm roots; but, struggle as she would, the cursed feeling increased. The Baroness quarreled with her husband, refused to condole with him on his gout, bullied the servants, and, generally, acted like a Fury.

Diana was molded in the clay to perfection. Endymion's reposing figure was a marvel of grace and masculine symmetry—except the head. The head was merely a lump of clay, without form and void of face.

The artist and the lady sat in the studio and discussed the head and face of Endymion. If ever there was expression and language in the artillery of looks, the eyes of Avice plainly said: "I want your face, your head, for the recumbent statue."

As they sat silently gazing at the unfinished group, a sudden idea occurred to her:

"I am a Baroness—above him in station and rank; he dare not presume to show that he admires me. I must help him."

Unconsciously to herself, she was under the despotic thraldom of the master passion of the human mind, and her voice now trembled with the emotion which she vainly endeavored to suppress, when, walking to the mantel, she took up a mirror, and, holding it before the astonished sculptor, said, in a soft, pleading voice:

"Behold, Signor Gideo, the incomparable face and head I desire for my Endymion!"

The sculptor turned pale, and his voice faltered as he answered:

"Madame, I—I am honored—I am grateful—I have never forgotten—that is; well, I mean that perhaps my wife might not approve."

"Your wife!" she gasped; "are you ——? I didn't understand that you were married—oh ——"

Her pent-up passion, dragged to daylight by this unexpected revelation, was too much for the frame that nursed the fire. She fell down in a paralytic fit, and she never recovered consciousness, except for a few minutes. Surrounded by medical men, with only one female sympathizer near—the newly-married wife of the sculptor—she passed the last minutes of her life in the studio of the man with whose love she had tried to tamper, and whose heart she had resolved to crush under the iron heel of her autocratic will.

The only words she was able to utter took the form of a question which showed how powerful the ruling passion of her later life remained even in the awful presence of Death:

"How long have you been married, Gideon?"

"Only two days, madame; or shall I call you Avice?"

A tumultuous sigh shook her grand bosom; the features of her face for a few moments were painfully contorted; her hands were clenched till the round white arms became as hard as marble; and Avice Fair, Baroness de Sangliere, passed away to the shadowy majority.

The work of art has never been completed, so far as the head is concerned; but it has been exquisitely cut in Parian marble, and still adorns the sculptor's studio in Rome, where it is always referred to as "The Headless Endymion."

MISS VERE CAREW

is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Swanborough, her mother being the excellent actress known as Miss Eleanor Bufton, and Miss Carew's beauty is likely to be a valuable aid to her advancement in the profession. She was educated in France principally, and before appearing on the stage was for some time a student at the Royal Academy of Music. During her short career she has appeared in various musical pieces with considerable success, notably at short notice in the leading part of "The Mascot." Miss Carew sings with taste and acts with intelligence, and should succeed.

DON QUIXOTE.—1. A beginner at billiards can assuredly hope to achieve success without the aid of a teacher. No very prominent player, so far as we know, has ever had a teacher. 2. Watching players is an aid, but it is useless without practice. 3. Sexton was playing billiards eight years before he began to be prominent, and he was even quicker in developing than is usual with youngsters. 4. If made with three balls, and on a table not smaller than 4½x9, an average of 25-26ths in fifty points of cushion-caroms is extremely large for one who has not been playing more than three months, not more than three nights a week, and not more than for two hours in any one night. It is one of the eccentricities of cushion-caroms that a tyro has been able to do this, and also to make a run of 13. He probably could not do either at the full game of three-ball billiards. It is as much as men can do steadily who have played the game of cushion-caroms for years and thousands of times. The balls must have been rolling into very favorable positions, in spite of you; and the effect of this rate of speed, instead of being favorable, will rather be to discourage you when you come to contemplate your slow rate of progress hereafter, if you take that performance as a fair measure of your capacity. You will probably play several years and not do twice as well, as a general thing.

SUBSCRIBER, Portland.—The term "native-born citizen" is an absurdity. It can mean nothing more than a native citizen or a born citizen, the two being one and the same. By "natural-born citizen" two or three things can be understood; but that also is an absurdity in the sense in which it is usually sought to be employed, as literally a born citizen is all that a natural-born citizen can possibly be. Any attempt at definition of either "natural-born citizen" or "native-born citizen" must necessarily be arbitrary. There are communities in which a "natural-born son" is regarded as a bastard, and there are others in which a "natural-born son" is a fool, or born idiot. As regards the use of the term "natural-born citizen" in the Constitution of the United States, it was probably meant to convey the idea that after a given time no one should be eligible to the Presidency of the United States who was not originally an inhabitant of the United States. An original inhabitant of a place was formerly one of the accepted meanings of "natural," but it is so no longer.

J. J. C., Chicago.—1. The longest river in the United States is called the Missouri-Mississippi. Some authorities maintain that it should be so called, while others maintain the contrary. Authorities also disagree as to whether the Missouri or the Mississippi River, if the two streams are regarded as separate, is the longer, there being no doubt at all that the Missouri is the larger. Authorities are also disagreed as to the exact length of the two, within something like fifty miles. It is possible that there has never been a strictly accurate survey. 2. See answers in amusement columns.

AMERICAN HOUSE, Lowell.—When it is agreed to play straight-flushes, they will beat four-of-a-kind. When it is not agreed to play them, they are not in the game, no matter whether simple straights are played or not. There are many good players who will not object to playing simple straights who will not consent to let into the game the forty different straight-flushes, any one of which is liable to bob up when no one is thinking of it, whereas the fifty-two fours-of-a-kind are always in contemplation and guarded against.

E. J. P., Baltimore.—In the one-ball game, the striker, when the cue-ball is frozen, can play away from the object-ball without incurring a miss. He must thaw them, although by the same stroke that does that he can freeze them again. In the present state of chaos and anarchy in billiards, however, it is wiser for players to harmoniously agree upon methods of play. For a long time past it has been difficult to get two decisions alike from different authorities, the trouble being that there are too many authorities, self-called.

C. F. W.—The fight between Heenan and Sayers was not decided in the ring, the referee leaving his position when the inclosure was invaded from Sayers' corner, in the thirty-seventh round, and not returning. Five rounds of a scrambling nature were fought after he left, when Sayers was taken from the ring, and, refusing to return at the call of the American, the latter followed suit. The fight was not resumed (although Heenan was anxious for a renewal), and the stakes were subsequently returned.

NATAGEE, Philadelphia.—1. Chambers and Edwards fought at Squirrel Island, Canada, Sept. 4, 1872. 2. Chambers and Clark fought near Chippewa Falls, Canada, March 27, 1879, the former winning after fighting 136 rounds in 2h. 20m. Squire McMullen was stakeholder. 3. John C. Heenan died Oct. 25, 1873. He weighed 178lb the day he fought Sayers, and 196lb when he met King.

M. J., Portland.—1. If B did not bet and did not look at his own cards, the dealer was obliged to tell him how many cards he himself drew, no matter how many others had bet. 2. B could not build his own pile of seven. 3. B could have the two piles on the table at once. 4. The jack counts under all circumstances, if fairly turned up.

POLICE, Fort Wingate.—There is a negro member of the police force in Boston, Mass. He was appointed several years ago, and has served his entire time in the office of the Police commissioners. He has never, we believe, been out on patrol, having, for obvious reasons, been limited to clerical duties within doors.

CONSTANT READER.—The men were not confined to weight, and as no mention of their weight was made in the reports published at the time it is probable that they did not go to scale, for which there was no necessity. Morrissey's regular fighting weight was 170lb; Yankee Sullivan's, 158lb.

S. M. R., St. Joseph.—That is a question for the judges or referee to decide, in accordance with the articles for the fight. If the action gave A no advantage, but was merely the result of too great haste in pitting his ball, it is not likely that it would be declared a foul.

SLIM, Bangor.—1. Andrew Marsden was never champion of England. 2. Heenan and Sayers fought for the champion belt and the regulation stake of £200 a side. 3. Patsy Sheppard was born Oct. 9, 1847.

C. B. R., Joplin.—The centre of population in the United States in 1880 was latitude 39 degrees 4 minutes 8 seconds, longitude 84 degrees 39 minutes 40 seconds, or about eight miles west by south from Cincinnati, O.

J. W. W.—If there were more than two playing, A won. Four sixes certainly did "go out" if some other player than B was "stuck." It was not necessary for A and B to throw off. If A and B alone were throwing, A loses the bet.

RAILROADS IN CHICAGO.—A correspondent whose inquiry has been mislaid is informed that the first regular passenger train run out of Chicago was to and from Desplaines River, a distance of ten miles, on June 1, 1849.

W. B. C.—1. There have been any number of riots on July 12. If you mean in this city, there have been several here. If you mean the one here in which the militia fired upon the people, it was in 1871. 2. See answer to "H. J. S." in amusement columns.

B. B., Shrewsbury.—The St. Louis Browns in 1880 included McGinnis, pitcher; Decker, catcher; Lancaster, Seward and McCaffrey on the bases; Pearce, short stop; and Cuthbert, Houtz and Cunningham in the outfield.

A. F.—1. Nolan, the pitcher of the Allegheny Club, has played with professional clubs of Indianapolis, Cleveland and San Francisco since 1877. 2. Dolan, and not Nolan, caught for the St. Louis Club.

H. E. H., Newark.—Such associations are governed more by their by-laws than by parliamentary rules, and if the meeting was properly convened we see no reason why a majority vote should not enable them to vacate the premises.

READER, Detroit.—If you fouled him he was entitled to the stakes, although you may have finished ahead. Had your opponent, after being fouled, beaten you out, he would not have had any occasion to claim foul.

READER.—Not having put his money up, the player can claim nothing in the event of there being a dispute as to whether or not he said he would play. It is to prevent such disputes that it is required to put money up at poker.

W. M., Pittsburg.—1. Nolan's record in 1881 was: batting, .251; fielding, .866. 2. Dickerson's averages in 1874 were: batting, .316; fielding, .891.

W. M. G.—The date on a coin has nothing whatever to do with determining the head or the tail, although it is usually on the side called the head.

G. W. S., North Laerosse.—This is an attempt to split hairs. You had better state the claim of each party, instead of propounding a conundrum.

P. R., Bellows Falls.—1. Tom Sayers and Tom King never fought. 2. Possibly they may, but at present there does not seem any likelihood that they will.

J. T. E., Williamsport.—We are unable to give you the address of any of the managers of colored baseball clubs in this city and Philadelphia.

A. S., Grinnell.—1. The University of Michigan won the Western college championship. 2. The winners were announced to, but did not make an Eastern trip.

H. H., Lisbon.—1. Our rule is that stamped directed envelops should be sent for letters. 2. By the Pennsylvania Railroad it is 87½ miles from New York to Trenton.

CONSTANT READER.—1. The shield is the head of a five-cent nickle of the old style. 2. There are several kinds of cent. 3. See answers in amusement columns.

H. F. S., Salt Lake City.—We cannot refer you to any dealer in that city. D. P. Foster, Rivermount Kennel, 29 South Fifth avenue, this city, can supply you.

V. Y.—Count F. de Lagrange's Gladiateur, ridden by H. Grimshaw, in 1865 won the Epsom Derby, Two Thousand Guineas and St. Leger Stakes in England, and the Grand Prize of Paris in France.

CLARE SLOWER, Milwaukee.—1. He never had a sister who was known as a pedestrian. 2. The party you mention assumed that name when she became a walker.

P. N. W., Wallingford.—There cannot possibly be any just comparison between billiards and checkers, for they are games widely different in practice and scope.

CONSTANT READER.—A loses. The meat did weigh fifty pounds in weighing more than that. A did not specify in making the bet that it should weigh just that, neither more nor less.

J. F. C., Peoria.—They shot in St. Louis, Mo., March 9, at fifty double birds, Bogardus winning by a score of 41 to 39.

C. O.—No such advertisement can be found in the papers we have on file.

STERLING, Nebraska City.—We could sell you some electrotypes at five dollars each.

BASEBALL, Johnstown.—The American Association and League Guides will be published in a few days.

CORA H., Washington.—Try H. Wolf, 112 Franklin street, Chicago, Ill.

M. W. W., Greene.—As your idea of a bridge may be a rope over some mountain chasm, we cannot undertake to decide the dispute.

G. E. K., Chicago.—If it was agreed to play straight flushes, but not otherwise, the five hearts beat the four kings and an ace.

QUINCEY, Washington.—A is winner of the game of pool if he has 38 clear and B has two marks.

W. P. M., Johnstown.—A goes out on high, which he could not have counted had he not also made game, or jack or low.

J. H. R., Baltimore.—1. See amusement answers. 2. John L. Sullivan has a brother who spars a little.

A. H., Philadelphia.—There is a run of six, and there always has been among those who know how to play cribbage, in 2, 4, 6, 5, 7, 3.

ATHLETIC, Philadelphia.—1. The first match-game of baseball ever played in Philadelphia was between the Equity and Pennsylvania Clubs, June 26, 1860, on the ground of the former club, at Ridge road and Columbia avenue. The score was 65 to 52 in favor of the Equity. 2. Col. Fitzgerald did not organize the Athletic Club. He, however, was one of the fifteen original members of the club. 3. It is a mistake. The Brooklyn Excelsiors played a picked nine of baseball players, and not a team selected from townball clubs. The game was played Sept. 24, 1860, and was not by any means the first ever played in Philadelphia or Pennsylvania. 4. Joe Quest never resided in Philadelphia. He hails from Meadville, Pa.

T. B. F., Pottsville.—He is a Scotchman, and that is his real name, so far as we know, he having run several races, here and on the other side, under it. By referring to our athletic department you will see an account of a race in which Cummings recently took part in England.

B. & D., Boston.—Prizes in pool tournaments usually range in total amount from $400, as in Syracuse, N. Y., to $750, as here. The entrance-fees are set at about $25, but are really only nominal, as a certain line of players must be secured to meet your views, and the bulk of these are averse to paying entrance-fees.

W. W., Binghamton.—1. Sullivan and Goss never engaged in a regular glove-fight—nothing more than a friendly set-to at an exhibition. 2. They never met in the ring.

H. B. JR.—1. Apply to the Department of Parks. 2. Those covered with kid are the more expensive. 3. Call at the rooms of the Association, where you can obtain full information.

J. A. Q. JR., Phila.—Those who bet that 1 and 2 would win are entitled to the money wagered. A and B gave up only when they saw they could not win, being outclassed.

VETERAN.—1. He ranks as one of the best, in both batting and fielding. 2. He has had a better batting average than that player almost every season. 3. He is considered to be a first-class player.

A. K.—B cannot play a lone hand against A at regular euchre, and A will count but one if he makes three tricks.

TORONTO, C. W.—He could look at the last trick taken in, but at no other.

F. A. R., Rochester.—He must be naturalized, if he was an orphan when he came here.

J. M. D.—It is for the judges alone to decide, unless both parties and the judges agree to leave it to us.

CLIPPER READER, St. Louis.—Sixes are high in poker-dice and in every other kind of dice.

G. H. P., Cheyenne.—Apply to E. S. Renwick, 19 Park place, New York.

A. K.—The length of the Harlem Bridge between abutments is 486 feet.

M. D.—Patsy Sheppard defeated Jim Murphy near New Haven, Ct., in six rounds, lasting twenty-two minutes, Sept. 4, 1869.

POSTAL CARD, La Salle.—The name does not appear in the business directory of this city.

J. B. R., Quitman.—Goldsmith Maid was foaled in 1857 and Dexter in 1858.

ENQUIRATOR, Albany.—Marshals Bazaine and McMahon are, we believe, both alive.

S. R., Lyons.—London, Eng., has a larger population than any other city in the world.

RATTLESNAKE.—Prior to the draw, any man can pass at poker and come in later, provided that he does not pass a bet.

G. W. W., Lexington.—He is employed as officer at the Hoffman House, this city.

M. J. D., Bernice.—We do not know. Probably about fifteen years ago.

THE BILLIARD TOURNAMENTS.

In Chicago, on Easter Monday, March 26, all but one of our leading billiard-players are to assemble. The occasion that summons them is a tournament that in several respects is to be an experiment. The game chosen is in itself an experiment, and the man has yet to be heard from who can give a good reason why it has been chosen. If it was to insure what is termed open-table play, there was no necessity for instituting such a game as this. The players have turned away from two games, one of which, first proposed in 1873, absolutely insures open play from first to last, while the other, proposed in 1875, insures at least one hundred and fifty per cent. more of it than the present game does. Intersecting lines must of necessity enforce a close nursing game, because they can be saddled, straddled, mounted and ridden by the player in eight different ways wherever they intersect. The games of 1873 and 1875 are the continuous balkline games; but the one of the intersecting lines was long ago fitly christened the "pony" game, because it was foreseen that the skillful player would saddle, straddle and ride. No one claims the paternity of these intersecting lines, so far as has come to public knowledge; and it is perhaps as well that he has not. If the short lines were indispensable in order to devise a game that should be different in appearance from some other, they have been placed obviously just where they should not have been. It would have been even better, although that would have still been objectionable, to have made the short lines consist of but four, instead of eight, and to have run them obliquely from the long line into each corner; but the true place to have put them, in the opinion of one who has devised three of the line-games of billiards, and has experimented with many other systems in order to choose the best of the lot, was to have run one on each side from the continuous line to the centre diamond on the long rail and one from the same long line to the centre diamond on each end-rail. This would at once have prevented the "crotch," possible with the short diagonal line, and have permitted the player to give an object-ball new life by sending it either across the table or up and down it. It would even answer to use eight short lines instead of four, and thus divide the table into thirds along both its length and its width. Played according to "the highest style of the art"—and we have seen it so played on a line ten and three-quarter inches from the cushion—the game in its existing twelve of intersections is chiefly one of nursing, and not very inspiriting or attractive nursing, at that. It will probably answer well enough for the Chicago tournament, but it cannot answer any better for anything than some one of the older games, whether nursing or non-nursing ones, are capable of answering. It certainly increases the possibilities of disputes between players, and gives the referee more labor and a larger latitude than a referee should ever have in well-regulated contests. There is no gain in this; and where nothing is to be gained, a change is not to be commended. The tournaments will be an experiment in another sense. Three or four of the contestants are under engagement, for various periods extending from a few months to three years, to the projectors of the tournaments; and among these are the two who by public repute are the strongest of the seven who are to make up the field in Chicago—Vignaux and Schaefer. If there are any who are not similarly engaged, they have clearly been put at a disadvantage, as they have to neglect their business and waste their time in doing what the others are forced to do, because paid to do. It is undeniable that the opportunity is open to both classes alike to win the prizes; but on general principles those who are under salary should stand the better chance of winning the higher grade of prizes, as there is not the occasion for anxiety in the cases of one class that there is in those of the other. There have been but two other tournaments that in this respect can be likened at all to these. In that held in this city in 1874 two players, Vignaux and Ubassy, were under contract to the projector, and there are not many persons who question that the twain played their hands together and divided their winnings. At the time of the tournament of 1879 at the Cooper Institute Schaefer entered into an agreement of the duration of a year or more with its projectors, which is the only case on record up to the present year of an engagement of a leading American player. It is worth remembering that in the only tournaments in which contract-players have taken part the first prize has been won by one of them. Vignaux has not now Ubassy as a partner in interest, and there is no danger of a division between him and Schaefer; but this does not help the other players much, under the circumstances. Vignaux and Schaefer will probably lead a forlorn hope, and the forlorn hope will be made up of Daly, Dion, Sexton, Morris and Wallace. Should any two or three of the contestants who are independent, if there be any at all, seek to form a combination, it is in the power of Vignaux and Schaefer to combine, as Vignaux and Ubassy did in the New York tournament of 1874 and the Brooklyn tournament of 1875. It is true that in the Brooklyn tournament the combination against Vignaux and Ubassy beat them out of first prize and gave it to Garnier; but Vignaux and Schaefer carry heavier guns than Vignaux and Ubassy did, and are absolute masters of the situation. The tournaments—that in this city, as well as the earlier one in Chicago—promise to be an interesting study to the lookers-on, aside from their experimental character with respect to choice of game in Chicago and with regard to utilizing in this way experts who are under contract. The playing in both affairs should be brilliant on the part of the leaders, who may at times be pushed and pressed by a spurt on the part of some one or more of the forlorn hope.

THE PROSPECTS OF BASEBALL.

An epoch having an important bearing on this American game began with the organization of the first National Association. This was in 1857. Thenceforward the game was played under an authorized code of rules. The second important epoch in the history of baseball began in 1871, when professionals were separated from amateurs, each class having a National Association of its own. The third epoch will date from the current year, wherein the professional class of players, previously represented by rival associations, have been united, clearly for the future good of the pastime. The Professional Association of 1871 was succeeded in 1876 by the National League. The new organization made open war upon abuses that had become too prevalent. The chief of these it checked; but it failed to control the professional market sufficiently to put a stop to offenses that, though of minor significance as directly affecting the public, were yet by force of example calculated to exercise a demoralizing effect upon professionals. Tricky playing could be reached and punished by independent legislation on the part of associations; but it was discovered that contract-breaking, revolving, insobriety and insubordination could be prevented only by combined action. It took some time for the League to realize this; but, when it did, that organization was not slow in joining in the adoption of an effectual remedy. This remedy lies in arbitration and compromise. Years ago THE CLIPPER pointed out that it was vital to the professional clubs, as a whole, that all of them should be guided by some organization having the power to insure absolute honesty alike in play and in the relations of players to managers. The League for a time took the ground that their organization had this power; and, although experience proved this idea to be erroneous, that body nevertheless arrayed itself determinedly against the organization of any other professional association. In 1882 a rival body sprang into existence. It went through the season with unprecedented financial success. The League sought to ignore it, but succeeded only in being itself convinced that a further continuance of its attitude of opposition to the existence of kindred professional associations must result disastrously to the pecuniary interests of all concerned. Old evils were springing into life again. An entire loss of confidence in the revival of honesty in play, as brought about by the creditable efforts of the League, was threatened. The attitude of the League naturally engendered resentment on the part of the younger association; but wise counsels speedily prevailed, and an era of peace and compromise at last dawned. The rival associations, ceasing to make war upon each other, became co-operative to the extent of appointing a conference committee. Both the League and the American Association adopted the report of this committee of conference, and the antagonism of 1882 ended in an action that goes as far as anything human can go in guaranteeing integrity of play and conduct in the professional arena. This wise action also indulges the hope that the season now about to open will be the most notable the game has ever known. Professionalism practically dates back to 1868, although it virtually existed some few years prior to that; but it is only now that for the first time no man found guilty of untrustworthiness in the ball-field, of dissipation or of gross insubordination, can find employment in any professional club. The efforts that this year have been made to place professionalism upon its highest possible plane must command the support of the general patrons of baseball, including the thousands who so long have felt constrained to withhold their unqualified countenance from professional contests. There is yet room for improvement in some minor details of club-management; but the gratifying fact stands prominently forth that for the first time since professional playing became a feature has individual rectitude been made the chief consideration in selecting club-teams. Never before has the professional standard been so high as now, and again we express the confident hope that a season of unprecedented pecuniary success awaits every professional club in this country.

SCIENCE vs. STRENGTH.

While the details so far furnished of the annual university boat-race in England are meagre, enough has been cabled to lead to the conclusion that it was purely a triumph of science. It was brains against muscle once more, with no "Oxford tie" about it, it being a signal defeat. Cambridge had the strength in their boat, and they also had the strength outside of it, for the betting was the heaviest in their favor ever known in a race between college crews in the Old Country; but they lacked the one other thing essential—brains to give competent directions at all times, and to avail themselves of opportunities that are likely to arise at any time. It was a poor day for the glories of Cambridge, but it was a great day for the short-enders.

BILLIARDS.

RUDOLPHE BEFORE THE MIKADO.

YOKOHAMA, Feb. 17, 1883.

EDITOR NEW YORK CLIPPER.—Dear Sir: In reading THE CLIPPER, I see that you take a great interest in the game of billiards, whatever it is to be in the future. Allow me to congratulate you. You are indeed the best authority in America.

I play before the Mikado (Emperor) next Monday, after which I will go to Peking on a good contract. I hope you are in good health and spirits. Regards to all professional friends. Trusting you believe me to be sincerely yours, A. P. RUDOLPHE.

Rudolphe on Feb. 1 gave an exhibition at the Windsor House, Yokohama, which The Japan Herald and The Yokohama Gazette, both of which are at hand, praise highly. His well-known exhibition carom made with two cues, which novelty he was the first to introduce into this country in 1868, was regarded as especially amusing in Yokohama. A Shanghai, China, paper in commenting at length upon an entertainment he gave at the Astor House there, is most favorably impressed with his ball-play, which has probably improved since he was in this country.

McMINNIE BEATS YATTER AT POOL.

BOSTON, MASS., March 17, 1883.

EDITOR NEW YORK CLIPPER.—Dear Sir: Moses Yatter and John McMinnie played pool for a purse of $100 at the St. Julien Billiard and Pool Rooms, No. 1,025 Washington street, this city, Friday evening, March 16. The attendance was very large, and much enthusiasm was manifested. The match was close throughout, and very exciting towards the finish. The game was played on an O. L. Briggs' 4½x9 table. Yatter gave McMinnie the odds of one ball each game, and the score was as follows: McMinnie won games 1, 4, 6, 7, 8, 12, 13, 14, 15, 18 and 21, and Yatter therefore won games 2, 3, 5, 9, 10, 11, 16, 17, 19, 20. The purse was awarded to McMinnie.

Respectfully, BEAN & DEARING.

THE POOL TOURNEY IN SCHENECTADY, N. Y.

Up to the close of Saturday, March 17, the games in this affair had resulted as follow:

	Won.	Lost.		Won.	Lost.
Frey	3	0	Shaw	2	1
King	3	1	Sutton	2	1
Knight	1	3	Pettingill	0	3
Dankelman	0	3	Bussinger	0	1
Leonard	3	1

It has been creditably conducted so far, as a correspondent assures us, and has proved successful to such an extent as to justify a repetition of the experiment at some not far-distant day. Albert Frey and Nellie and Louis Shaw are to give there on March 26 one of those exhibitions that have, thanks to the novelty of a lady being one of the contestants, been so thoroughly enjoyed of late in other cities.

SCHAEFER'S PRETTY WORK IN CHICAGO.

As by telegraph was announced in this column last week, Jacob Schaefer arrived in Chicago on March 12, preparatory to going into practice for the tournament of March 26 and later dates. On the 13th he played Thomas Wallace at the "pony" game, eight-inch line, and defeated him by 600 to 282. Wallace made only five runs over 14, they being 16, 16, 19, 29 and 37, and yet averaged 10.2-28. According to the score published, he never failed to count in all of his twenty-eight innings, while Schaefer in his twenty-nine failed to score in but one inning, and that was the opening shot of the game. Schaefer's best five runs were 107, 59, 49, 45 and 36, and his average was 20.20-29. Another game by Schaefer resulted, according to The Interocean, in an average of 17.35-42 in 759 points. Either the total was 749 or the average had to be 18.3-42 (if 759 points). This odd total has probably been reached by a run that overlapped the game that was intended to be played. The "averages" of broken games, so frequently reported, are really worthless, whether they are made by stopping a game just when a long run has sent the average up, or by making a long run and thus lengthening the score by points that properly belong to a later game. To give value to an average or a run, it should be made only in a game whose length is settled upon before a ball is struck. On the 14th inst. Schaefer played another game with Wallace and averaged 23.3-26 in 600, while Wallace scored 202, his average being 7.20-26. In this game Wallace's best runs were 52, 27, 29 and 19, and Schaefer's 128, 66, 63, 61. Thus Jacob is doing nicely, and on the whole, regarding these as three consecutive games, much better and steadier than any other player has yet done who is to take part in the Chicago tournament. It is scarcely reasonable to expect one of his style to do much better than this as a steady thing; but he is capable of spurting and sending his average up 100 per cent. by making a much larger run than 128, and having the good fortune to get two or three such runs into one game of 600, while not making more than one run of triple figures in some other game. This is borrowing from one game to feed another, and is known in billiards as "robbing Peter to pay Paul." It has its advantages. It is very useful in knocking out an opponent who is steady, and for conferring reputation it far surpasses steadiness, on the principle that he who runs 250 in a game of 500 and wins by only a point is certain to be regarded as a much greater player than he who has made no better run than 60, although both have made substantially the same average, and one has played quite as well as the other, the only material difference between them being that one has had the good fortune to connect four or five of his runs into one, so to speak, while the other has been forced to cut his up. But only one of the players looms up grandly, and that is he who ran 250. People proclaim him "The King of Billiards," "The Dandy of the Balkline," "The Wizard of the Cue," etc., while of the other they admit that he is a good billiard-player, but not a genius. The trouble is that when the steadier player wins—and steadiness must win the oftener in the long run—these same people shrug their shoulders meaningly. They would rather charge their "King," their "Wizard," or their "Dandy" with dishonesty than acknowledge that their own judgment had all along been hasty, ill-founded and unbalanced. This is the time for Schaefer, for the credit of Western billiards especially, to prove himself not alone in his practice-game, but also in the tournament, a "King," a "Dandy," and a "Wizard" all in one. He has been doing well since he struck Chicago, and we hope that he will continue. This is the last that we shall probably be permitted to hear of Schaefer's practice-games, as we are privately advised from Chicago under date of March 18 that he has been given a private table at his boarding-house on Wabash avenue, and now plays in secret, with his friend Harry Cole as an opponent. A player of his style can gain nothing by this. There is reason to believe that he has for years done too much playing, not exactly in private, but with personal friends who worship him and who play accordingly. One probable effect of this secret playing will be to start rumors that will make the public think that Schaefer is doing much better than he is, because people will naturally reason that it can be only because a man is accomplishing wonders that he is being made a "dark horse" of.

Since the foregoing was placed in type, the subjoined has come along by telegraph:

CHICAGO, March 19.—Jacob Schaefer, in practice for the coming billiard tournament, to-day ran 227 points, and averaged 43 in 600 points, balkline game. This is the largest average recorded in a public performance.

The closing sentence exaggerates the feat. Schaefer's game could not possibly have been any more public a performance than Vignaux's run of 256 at the Columbian room last week or than Slosson's 265, 235 and 209 at his own room. Schaefer could have accomplished it only in a billiard-room, as Vignaux and Slosson have accomplished theirs; and upon investigation it may transpire that he did it at his boarding-house on Wabash avenue, and on that table which has been privately set up for him. Even if it was done in Tom Foley's room, it has been frequently surpassed in as public a manner on a much wider line. We should infinitely prefer to hear that Jacob is averaging 25 in Tom Foley's room or the Brunswick Hall against Lon Morris, than 60 in Wabash avenue against Harry Cole.

THE CHICAGO PRELIMINARY TOURNAMENT.

Its termination was reached on March 13, when Wallace and Morris were tied for first and second prizes, Gallagher getting third through Morris' defeat of Carter in game No. 15, which was the last of the series, and in it Morris made his highest average, as marked in parentheses in the third line of the four comprising every square in the appended table. The first line of the squares gives the number or order of the game, the second the total of the player whose name is on the left-hand side, the third his average, and the fourth his best run. The heavy figures denote his best run during the tournament, and the figures in parentheses indicate his best single average. None of Maggioli's averages is so marked, because he did not make a full score by winning a game. Morris and Wallace played off on the night of March 14, and the former won by a score of 600 to 461, on an average of 9.23-53 against 8.37-53, the best runs being 67 for Morris and 54 for Wallace. This gave Morris the first prize, $150, while Wallace takes $100 and Gallagher $50. The two former at the same time secured places in the main tournament, while Gallagher, Carter, Heiser and Maggioli were excluded.

GERSTEL TO BUSSEY.

Joseph Gerstel is determined to be neither subdued nor ignored, and, with the view of protecting himself, he on St. Patrick's Day established a "Literary Bureau, East and West," of his own. We are always with the under dog when the mourners are crowding him too fast, and so give Joseph room to breathe;

CINCINNATI, March 17, 1883.

EDITOR NEW YORK CLIPPER.—Dear Sir: My attention having been called to a communication from Harry Bussey in your paper (edition of March 17), to which I deem in justice to myself a reply is necessary, permit me to say that I am seeking no newspaper notoriety, and, to obviate the necessity of any further communications, I simply desire to say, in reply to Mr. Bussey's insinuations that I had no money, that I have this day deposited with Mr. Tony Honing the sum of $100 to play Mr. Bussey a game of billiards, straight three-ball carom, 600 points up, on a 5x10 table. Now, if Mr. B. is desirous of playing me, I see no valid reason why a game cannot be arranged, as I certainly am anxious to meet him. I will agree upon any reponsible person as final stakeholder (outside of Messrs. Brunsw

STRAY SHOTS.

 Cornelius Dean, once prominent in the billiard business as owner of one of the best-paying rooms in this vicinity, died a few days ago in Brooklyn, E. D.

 Randolph Heiser was to have left Chicago for this city March 18.

 P. Ahern has been elected an honorary member of the National Billiard Association.

 Vignaux and Sexton arrived in Chicago March 18.

 On the 17th inst. a gentleman who had been practicing for a week or two with Joseph Dion at the "pony" game saw Slosson play it for the first time. Slosson's playing was a revelation to him, notwithstanding that he supposed it was on an eight-inch line. It was more of a revelation when he was made aware that the line was nine-and-one-quarter inches.

 "Simon Wasp" sends us word that the noise-subduers are booming in Texas.

 Louis Shaw and wife, with Albert Frey to aid them, gave one of their reliable entertainments in Rochester, N. Y., March 12.

 Messrs. Bean & Dearing of Boston, Mass., contemplate holding a pool tournament at their room.

 Frank Maggioli was to have left Chicago for New Orleans on March 17. He intends to enter into the New York preliminary.

 Knight and Dankleman have both been playing poorly in the Schenectady tournament.

 It was stated in our past issue that Eugene Carter had challenged anyone in the late tournament in Chicago to play a match at any game for five hundred dollars a side. Nothing has as yet come of it, but there is always a liability that young Thomas Wallace can be matched to play any Western expert except Schaefer.

 John Bessinger has been sick, which will account for his having played but one game so far in the Schenectady tournament.

 Peter Tracy has shifted his quarters in White Plains, N. Y., and is now at the Standard House, where he is shortly to give the boys a grand "blow-off," after his own inimitable fashion. He has been promised that one of his cards on that occasion shall be Vignaux.

 George Sutton, according to a Schenectady paper, was on March 20 in this city, to take unto himself a bride in the person of a Miss Schwartz, attached to the Candee House, Schenectady.

 Thomas J. Gallagher has gone to St. Louis, and will probably practice there for the New York preliminary tournament, which, if there is no change of programe, will be held at the Columbian Room.

 Morris and Wallace are practicing together in Chicago for the tournament there next week.

 Joseph Dion has finally been prevailed upon to go to Chicago, and will start on March 22. Meantime he is running eight miles a day for his benefit physically, and averaging from nine to twelve at the "pony" lines with the view of making it interesting for Sexton, Morris, Wallace and Daly, the last of whom also starts towards the close of this week. Despite the rumors that he has run 180 in one game and averaged between 35 and 36 in another, Daly has not been playing well in practice. The "pony" rears and kicks with him, and is unmanageable.

 Mr. Sanford has opened a fine room in Lynn, Mass. It contains six of Collender's tables, is carpeted with Brussels, and is regarded as one of the most elegant rooms in New England.

 The old round-the-table game has been revived with much favor in Boston, Mass.

 Moses Yatter is managing Sanford's room, Lynn, Mass. A correspondent writes that he is making runs of 30 and 40 at the "pony" game daily.

 The pool tournament at the Unique Billiard Hall, Vine street, Cincinnati, which was begun March 12, is going on with unabated warmth.

POOL AT EISEMAN'S ROOM.—By an advertisement in another column it will be seen that the proprietor of this Bowery house, which is growing in prominence and popularity, announces liberal prizes in money, together with a billiard-table, for the first-class tournament of which we gave warning last week, and of which we shall have more to say anon.

ATHLETIC.

CINCINNATI BICYCLE CLUB.

The opening day's racing of the Spring tournament of this club was held March 15 at Power Hall, Exposition Building, Cincinnati, O. There was a large assemblage present. The result of the several events is shown below:

Ten-mile race—Julian Wright first, in 41m.; W. H. Reed second, in 41m. 18s.; John Barclay third. Reed led on sufferance until the latter part of the ninth mile, when Wright shot past and was never afterwards headed.

Five mile race, Enquirer medal—Warner Galway first, in 18m. 55s.; H. Hall second, in 19m. 7⅛s. Ned Landy, Col. Townley and E. Ammler also started. Hall took the lead, and maintained it until the fifteenth lap. At this point Galway went to the front with Landy and Townley in hot pursuit and Hall in the rear. As the quartet were nearing the close of the third mile Townley strove to pass Landy, but collided with the wall and was thrown to the floor. His machine struck the pedal of Landy's, breaking it and thus rendering it useless. The latter continued in for two laps, but then withdrew. Townley was not injured. Galway had it all his own way after this unfortunate interference to a splendid struggle. The championship of the club goes with the medal.

One-mile race, boys—A. Muhlhauser first, in 3m. 50s.; F. Jennings second. A. Emery, I. Taylor, G. Burrows, L. Keck, J. Mackey, H. Tudor and W. Glenn also started.

Two-mile race—A. W. MacBriar first, in 7m. 50s.; John Innes second, Amos Wooley third, and F. Jennings last.

One-mile race—H. S. Livingstone first, in 4m. ⅛s.; beating C. Allen, C. M. Galway and J. Cady.

Fat men's race—F. Dawson first, in 3m. 51s.; defeating George Davis, M. J. Norton and W. A. Whiting, the latter alone starting from scratch.

HUGHES AND HART AT IT AGAIN.

A snide walking match was attempted in Troy, N. Y., 16, 17, says our correspondent, under the announced management of Albert Edwards. Frank H. Hart and John Hughes, Madison-square Garden heroes, were announced to do a 26-hour go-as-you-please for $250 a side. Incidental to the main event Susie Wiley and Frank Edwards, "California champions," were each to give an exhibition walk of ten miles. The show was in Concordia Hall, a small out-of-the-way place lately used as a German gymnasium. The track was not surveyed, but was said to require 28 circuits to make a mile. The boys started at 8.30 P. M. March 16 to the music of a small band and a gathering of about 200—which, by the by, did not increase. There was no judge or referee, and the two scorers were unknown and knew nothing of the business. About 9.30 on St. Patrick's night Hughes, who had been "chewing" and cussing the "nager" all day, publicly gave away the snap while quarreling with the scorer, admitting that the show was a salary one as far as the peds were concerned. The walk broke up a little later, the board showing: Hughes, 142 miles; Hart, 121. On gaining the greenroom Hart and Hughes had a brief fight, in which the "nager" got the better of the "lepper," insofar that he gave him a bloody nose. The police separated them. Later the hotel folks where the ped. party was stopping sent for the police, as the party was about to skip without settling. They then settled and moved on New York. The management of the show lost about $150. It was his intention to have repeated the "match" in Albany if successful in Troy. Hart and Hughes had barely car-fare to New York, they said.

BILL RICHARDS, who was Bill Lang's opponent in the memorable race at Royal Oak Park, Manchester, Eng., when they both ran a mile (dead heat) in 4m. 17⅛s., and who has been in this country a number of years, sends forth from St. Louis an offer to match an unknown against anyone to run 135 yards, for $2,000 a side, give or take $200 for expenses, J. K. Kittleman preferred. Address Tom Kelly, 605 Market street, St. Louis, Mo.

L. E. MYERS' visit to England for the purpose of running a second series of races with W. G. George has, we learn, been postponed until Fall, and if negotiations now pending result in inducing George to come to the States again it will not be made at all. The New-Yorker will probably pay a visit to California in the interim, for the purpose of engaging in a series of contests with the Pacific Slope cracks Masterson and Haley.

BICYCLE CLUBS in the western part of Michigan are to rendezvous at Ann Arbor, June 30, and ride from there to Detroit next day, where they will be joined by wheelmen belonging to clubs in the Eastern part. The 'cyclists will then cross into Canada and visit Niagara Falls and Buffalo, N. Y., returning by way of Cleveland, O.

WHEN ARTHUR CUNNINGHAM of Rochester, N. Y., discovered that Mahoney's Unknown, against whom he had backed Flagg, was no other than clever John McMahon, he refused to go on with the match March 17, and paid forfeit, consisting of $60 in money and a gold watch representing $40.

THE FIFTY-MILE BICYCLE RACE for the championship of Illinois will take place at the Exposition Building, Chicago, Ill., April 2, commencing at two P. M. The competitors will be Conkling, Harry Schempeler and Ernest Mehring. Frank E. Yates will be the referee.

THIEBAUD BAUER and Duncan C. Ross appeared at New Orleans, La., in a Græco-Roman wrestling contest, for an imaginary stake of $1,000, on Sunday night, March 18. Bauer won the first and third falls, the pair giving the crowd one hour and forty minutes of fun for their money.

GEORGE WERNER defeated Benjamin Eisenhood in a seventy-five-yards run, for one hundred dollars a side, at Shenandoah, Pa., winning by two inches only. J. C. Holt subsequently vanquished William Bishop for a fifty-dollar note.

BARGOSSI, who a few years ago was defeated by George Hazael in a fifty-mile race in London, Eng., is announced to run from Rome to Paris for a wager of two thousand dollars.

ROBERT WRIGHT and Richard Schroeder will give an athletic entertainment at the Detroit Opera-house April 24, at which their pupils will appear.

ARTHUR CHAMBERS offers $300 in prizes for a 135yds. handicap, to be run at Pastime Park, Philadelphia, May 14, being Whit-Monday.

EVERT J. WENDELL, the celebrated sprinter of Harvard College, now traveling in India with the Rev. Phillips Brooks, was reported to be very ill at last advices.

THE SECRETARY of the N. Y. Amateur Association is notified of a letter awaiting him at this office.

HARRY O'BRIEN (F. W. Homan) defeated J. Bradley (in receipt of three yards) in a hundred-yards race at Boston, Mass., March 15. Time, 10⅛s.

NEW YORK LACROSSE CLUB.

A meeting of this organization was held on Saturday evening, March 17, at the Hotel Brunswick, at which the following board of officers was elected: Honorary-president, Hermann Oelrichs; president, Erastus Wyman; vice-president, F. Wheeler; secretary, George T. Shaw; treasurer, T. M. Marson; captain, W. H. Journeay; executive committee—S. Isles, A. Ritchie and A. Merritt; delegates to the National Association, H. Balch and George T. Shaw. It was voted that the Oelrichs Champion Cup, held by the club, should be presented to the National Lacrosse Association, to be competed for in 1884, subject to a set of rules to be drawn up by the New York Club. When the report of the Committee on Grounds was taken up it was found that the club had the choice of three localities, viz., the free grounds at Prospect Park, the inclosed ground at the new Washington Baseball Park in South Brooklyn, and the inclosed grounds of the Manhattan Athletic Club, now in progress of preparation. The whole matter of selecting grounds was left in the hands of Messrs. Merritt and Balch, subject to revision by the Executive Committee of the club, to report thereon by April 15. In the interim the club members will practice at Prospect Park, their opening game being appointed for Saturday, March 31, at 3 P. M. After the adjournment the members sat down to a wine supper at the hotel, and a very pleasant social time ended the annual meeting of the club for 1882. Among those present were Messrs. Flannery, Balch, Journeay, A. Ritchie, Marson, Wheeler, Shaw, Byrne, Isles, Veysey Sparks and several new members. Recently there was some difference of opinion in the club growing out of an effort made somewhat prematurely to send an American lacrosse team to England to represent the United States; but the matter has been amicably settled, and the club is now a unit in support of an enterprise of the kind in the near future, the English trip under the auspices of the club being largely dependent upon the result of the visit of the Canadian lacrosse players to England this year. If the Canadian team meets with financial success, and, moreover, finds that the opposition in the field made by the English lacrosse teams is not such as to prove a formidable barrier to the success of a United States twelve in 1884, then the New York Club will organize an American lacrosse team to visit England in that year; but should the outcome of the Canadian trip not be satisfactory in a pecuniary point of view, and should they find the English twelves foemen worthy of their steel, it will be advisable to wait a season or two, until the proposed venture presents a more promising outlook. At any rate, the New York Club will prepare for the proposed trip in 1884 by making the most of their time this year to get a strong club team in training for one thing, and by their efforts to foster the game throughout the land still further promote the object they have in view by enlarging the field from which to select a picked twelve of the United States.

These names cover all entries. No man will be allowed to run whose name does not appear on the acceptance-card.

THE STEELE-HERBERT RACE.

The second of a series of three races arranged by Wm. Steele and T. C. Herbert was decided at Ashland, Pa., on Saturday, March 17. The distance was ten miles. The first race, five miles, was run as Blossburg March 3, and was won by Herbert by a few feet. The ten-mile race was witnessed by over one thousand persons, not more than five hundred of whom probably paid for the privilege. Both men stripped well, though Herbert looked a trifle fine. So far as style and action is concerned there is little comparison between the men as runners. Steele is a runner all over. His stride is big and his carriage graceful. Herbert's gait is short and quick, a good deal like Hazael's. Herbert showed the way for nearly eight miles. Then Steele went to the front. Herbert passed him inside of a quarter-mile, and retained the lead until within five hundred yards of the finish, when Steele, with a fine burst of speed, took the lead. Herbert made an effort to respond, but the steam wasn't there. Steele continued to gain, and came home a winner by thirty yards in 55m. 43s. Not more than $500 changed hands outside of the stakes. Steele's backers had the most money and the most confidence. Some Herbert men tried to put the odds on Steele by betting two to one on him among themselves, but the Steele men wouldn't bite. The third race, fifteen miles, is to be run at Canton, Bradford County, Pa., March 31.

QUIRK VS. RODGERS.—James Quirk, the sprinter, is at present domiciled at Shenandoah, Pa., where he is training a novice. He offers, says a correspondent, to make a match with Fred Rodgers for $500 a side at seventy-five yards, and says that he will give Rodgers a yard in seventy-five if the latter will give odds of $500 to $300 on the result. Rodgers and Quirk have run seventy-five yards on two occasions. In the first instance Quirk beat Rodgers by about two and a half feet at Ashland in 1881. In December last Rodgers reversed this result by seven yards at Shenandoah. In the latter race Quirk went lame from a strained sinew.

JAMES ROBINSON'S reappearance in Cambridge, Mass., has made the Harvard undergraduates clamorous for his re-engagement in the capacity of trainer, etc., in which position they are aware from past experience how valuable are his services. The Harvard Herald strongly urges his reinstatement, and it may fairly be assumed that in doing so it but voices the desire of the college athletes. We hope that the faculty will lend a willing ear to the appeal so earnestly made.

HOYLE & ACTON have received sixty-nine entries for their All-American 135yds. handicap, to be run at Pastime Park, Philadelphia, March 26. Fred Rodgers is scratch-man, having a nominal start of seven yards; J. Quirk, nine yards. Many good men are on the published list. Acceptances $1, closing March 22. Arthur Chambers will be referee and Watt Booth pistol-firer.

A GYMNASIUM under the control of the Young Men's Christian Association of New Bedford, Mass., was established recently. It was fitted under the direction of Prof. R. J. Roberts of Boston, with $1,300 worth of apparatus. The members number 150, and one of Prof. Roberts' Boston assistants gives instruction twice a week.

NICK MURPHY, first winner of the O'Leary American belt, has developed into a strapping young fellow, and, having added a knowledge of the art of sparring to his other accomplishments, he last week attained to the distinction of "knocking out" his man. The man from Haverstraw is now taking lessons in wrestling from Wm. Muldoon.

WILLIAM GRIFFIN, the one-hour champion of England, took a farewell benefit at Nutford Hall, Marylebone, London, Feb. 28, prior to his departure for "the shores of Amerikay." He was announced to start March 10, and if he did he ought to be here now. This doubtless means a match with John Meagher of the Bay State.

JAMES DAWSON says in regard to the 135yds. handicap to be run at Sænger Park, Philadelphia, March 24, 27, that he will lay 20 to 1 against it being won by any man who did not start in any of his other handicaps. There's a chance for anyone having a dark horse.

HURST VS. MCANALLY.—A match was made at Ashland, Pa., March 8, by Timothy Hurst of that place and Peter McAnally of Gerardville, Pa., to run twenty miles for $200 a side, April 14. It will be remembered that on Feb. 28 McAnally defeated Hurst by about five hundred yards in a ten-miler at Pottsville.

D. A. DRISCOLL, having got himself in fairly good condition by practice at the Institute Fair building, Boston, has challenged Ed. Holske to walk from one to five hours, for $500 a side, in three weeks, or twenty-five miles in two weeks, although he can have more time if he wants it.

THOMAS KELLY defeated Frank Raymond (second), Jesse Clark, Neal Bolan, Fred Hummel, Charles Hanlon and Frank Marquette in a five-mile run, for $50 and $25, at the Fair Grounds, Columbus, O., March 15. His time was 35m. 20s.

CHARLES A. BASSETT of Newcomerstown, O., a one-armed runner, challenges Charles Wilson of Indianapolis, Ind., to run one hundred yards, left-hand side, for as much as $500.

MIKE DONAHUE, the strong-limbed young smithy, defeated Johnny Lynch in a collar-and-elbow wrestle at Wood's Athletic Grounds, Williamsburg, L. I., March 16.

A TRACK for foot-racing, one hundred and sixty yards long (straight) and having a width of thirty feet, is almost finished at Sænger Park, Philadelphia.

THE New Rochelle Athletic Club has elected Clarence Haskell president and Cortlandt I. Davis first vice-president.

OXFORD DEFEATS CAMBRIDGE.

The cable brings the following account of the race between the eight-oared crews of these universities, which, it will be seen, resulted in the defeat of the crew who were great favorites in the betting:

LONDON, March 15, 1883.—The annual boat-race between crews from Cambridge and Oxford Universities took place on the Thames this afternoon. The course was, as usual, from Putney to Mortlake, a distance of four miles and two furlongs. Oxford won by three lengths. At five o'clock the weather was gloomy and cold. The water was smooth and there was but little wind. A large concourse of spectators lined the banks of the Thames. The tide was sluggish. The boats started at forty-one minutes past five o'clock. Cambridge had the Middlesex side of the river and Oxford the Surrey side. Oxford led by a length at the Duke's Head, a short distance from the starting-point. The Oxford crew had the better of an uneven start. They pulled a regular stroke of nearly forty to the minute, and were almost clear of the Cambridge boat at Craven Steps, about six furlongs from the start. The Cambridge boat here deflected towards the Middlesex shore. Oxford, at the end of the first mile, which they covered in 4m. 15s., were two lengths ahead and were rowing well together. Here darkness thickened and snow began to fall. The Cambridge crew were splashing considerably by the time the Soap Works were reached. At Hammersmith Bridge, one and three-quarter miles from Putney, they were nine seconds behind Oxford. At Cheswick Eyot, three-quarters of a mile beyond Hammersmith, they were four lengths astern, but were going better. A violent hailstorm came on when they were at this point. The Cambridge eight quickened their speed, but when in Corney Reach it was evident that it was all over with them. Oxford came in the easiest of winners. The result of the race causes greater excitement than any previous race did, in consequence of the heavy betting on the Cambridge crew, who at the start were the favorites at 7 to 2. The defeat of a crew on whom such odds were laid is unprecedented. The following are the crews and their weights:

OXFORD.
G. C. Bourne, New College, bow	154lb.

FRENCHY JOHNSON DEAD.

The death in Florida of Frenchy A. Johnson, the well-known colored sculler and trap-shot, is announced in a dispatch dated March 19. He was an excellent second-class oarsman, and was repeatedly successful in regattas and match races. Some of the more important rowing events in which he figured conspicuously and their results were as follow: June 13, 1877, at a regatta held at Silver Lake, Mass., he was an excellent second to Fred Plaisted, who rowed the three miles, turn, in 21m. 49⅝s.; John A. Landers third. Hanlan started favorite for this race, but something went wrong with his outrigger, accidentally he claimed, and he "got left." At the Boston City Regatta, July 4 following, Johnson again finished second to Plaisted, whose time for two miles was 14m. 24⅝s.; J. A. Ten Eyck third. Hanlan also started in this race, but was ruled out for fouling Plaisted at the half-distance. Sept. 27, 1877, he engaged in an open regatta on Owasco Lake, near Auburn, N. Y., for prizes offered by the citizens, the race, three miles, turn, being won by C. E. Courtney, with James H. Riley second and Johnson third. Oct. 17, following, a similar race took place at Owego, N. Y., the order of finish being the same, and Courtney then making the fastest time on record, 23m. 14½s. On May 30, 1878, a regatta was held at Silver Lake, and Frenchy started in the professional scullers' race, three miles, turn, which was considered a moral for J. H. Riley, but Johnson gave them a surprise by winning in 21m. 36½s., Riley second and J. A. Ten Eyck third. He next appeared at the Fourth of July regatta at Boston, Mass., same year, where he was again successful in the scullers' race, rowing the three miles, with a turn, in 21m. 42s. Eph Morris was second. On Aug. 15, same year, he appeared at the regatta of the Eastern Rowing Association at Silver Lake, winning the three-mile race in 21m. 29s., J. H. Riley second, Ellis Ward third. C. E. Courtney was a starter, but was taken sick. On July 5, 1879, he finished behind Riley in a three-miler at Owasco Lake, N. Y., the winner's time being 20m. 52s. Aug. 20, following, at a regatta held at Charlotte, N. Y., Frenchy was second to C. E. Courtney, whose time for the three miles was 22m. 5s. During the following Winter he visited Florida, inducements being offered to him to row in a scullers' regatta at Jacksonville Jan. 31, 1880. The distance was about three miles and a half, and Johnson won in 23m. 15s., George W. Lee second, Tuttle not finishing. On their way home he and Lee stopped at Savannah, Ga., where Johnson again defeated George, in a three-mile race, March 17, 1880, the time being 21m. 11s. On July 4 following Johnson and F. Hilley won the double-sculls at the Boston regatta, doing three miles in 25m. 32s. After that date deceased did little rowing, paying more attention to pigeon and glassball shooting, at which he became an expert. He had been ailing for a year or more, and was a resident of Florida for a long time previous to his demise, having gone there in search of the health he had lost.

THE NATIONAL REGATTA.

The appended circular in regard to this annual event has been sent out by the secretary of the N. A. A. O.:

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 13, 1883.

The Passaic River Amateur Rowing Association having invited the N. A. A. O. to hold this year's regatta at Newark, N. J., and the requirements of this Association having been generously met, I am directed to announce that the eleventh annual regatta of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen will be held at Newark, commencing on the 7th day of August next.

W. H. GIBSON, Secretary.

LARCHMONT YACHT CLUB.—There was a large attendance of members at the annual meeting of this club, held at Delmonico's, this city, on March 15, great interest being manifested in regard to the election for officers. There were two tickets in the field, and one hundred and fourteen votes were cast, with the following result: Commodore, Charles E. Jenkins; vice-commodore, A. Eryan Alley; rear-commodore, A. P. Montant; treasurer, T. B. Brown; recording secretary, F. L. Anthony; corresponding secretary, Oliver Adams; measurer, Frank E. Towle; trustees—T. B. Brown, Harold A. Sanderson and T. R. Fisher. The total membership of the club is 254, and the fleet consists of four steamers, seventeen schooners, 38 cabin-sloops, three yawls, six cutters, sixteen open-sloops, and eighteen cat-rigged sloops. Ten new members were elected.

PULLMAN CLUB REGATTA.—The directors of the Pullman (Ill.) Athletic Club met Saturday evening, March 10, and decided on the following, viz.: June 22, 23, professional regatta, three miles, with a turn. First Day—Single-sculls, $1,000 to first, $200 to second, and $100 to third. Second Day—Consolation-race, $200 to first, $100 to second. Double-sculls, $300 to first (if there are two starters). The club have been corresponding with Lee, Hanlan, Hosmer, Ross, Kennedy, Riley, Plaisted, Ten Eyck, Driscoll, Hamm and Conley, all of whom stated they would come if the first prize was made $1,000. As this has been done, there should be a good list of entries.

P. A. DEMPSEY.—This excellent amateur sculler, now a member of the Pennsylvania Boat Club of Philadelphia, will during the present season row single in regattas at the following places: May 30, Newark, N. J.; April 9, on the Harlem; July 4, at Boston; Aug. 7, Newark, N. J. (national regatta); Aug. 26, Saratoga; and in September at Sunbury, Pa. He is having a new boat built, 31ft. long and 11in. wide, weighing 28lb. It will have a Davis rig. He will also row double with George Steazell. Hescheimer, Beck, Hime and Neazle will represent the club in four-oared events. Evidently the Pennsylvanias mean business this year.

ROSS VS. HANLAN.—Wallace Ross of St. John, N. B., on March 19 opened the newspaper rowing campaign of 1883 by issuing a challenge to Hanlan to row a four or five mile race for one thousand dollars a side, the winner to receive all moneys from railways, etc. Ross offers to allow Hanlan five hundred dollars for expenses (an unprecedented allowance in proportion to the amount of stakes), provided he agrees to row at St. John, or he will take the same sum and row at Toronto, the race to take place on or after July 1. Counter propositions from Hanlan are now in order.

J. N. OSTROM, the old Cornell stroke, latterly of Detroit, has located in Chicago, Ill., where he is engaged in the engineering department of the Burlington Railway. He will probably join the Farraguts, and give that club the benefit of his experience and knowledge of the art of rowing this season.

ON THE authority of Fred Plaisted, it is said that the directors of the Kansas State Fair will offer $2,500 for a professional scullers' regatta next Fall.

AN INTERNATIONAL REGATTA will be held at Geneva, Switzerland, July 22, 23. French oarsmen are expected to compete.

FINNEY vs. BECKWITH.

It is evident that James Finney, the English swimmer, is determined, if possible, to bring W. Beckwith to the point of swimming a match with him prior to the latter's setting sail for our shores, so as to decide who is entitled to the champion-ship. Read the following, which is of interest to American readers because of Beckwith's contemplated visit:

EDITOR SPORTING LIFE.—Sir: In January I offered to swim Beckwith any day in May, so as not to interfere with his arrangements for his trip to America, and he takes five weeks to reply. It is impossible for me to comply with his request to take only $50 for my share of gate-money. If Beckwith really wants to swim, I will swim him for $500 a side, either the third or fourth week in April, and, to show that I will give him every advantage, he shall select the bath in London not less than twenty-five yards long (though I would prefer the open), allowing me $25 for expenses, the winner to take two-thirds of the gate-money; or, if he likes to come North, I will make him the same allowance for expenses, or will meet him half-way—say at Birmingham, when no allowance will be needed. Judging from Beckwith's letter, it is evident he wants during his sojourn in America to style himself champion of England. He thinks the giving up of the cup will bring "new blood" to the front. The "blood" is ready, and unless he makes a match he is no longer champion. Articles complying with the above-named conditions will receive my immediate attention. Yours, etc., JAMES FINNEY.

41 King street, Oldham, March 2, 1883.

ELECTION.—At a meeting of the Pennsylvania Yacht Club of Philadelphia the following were elected officers for 1883: Commodore, O. F. Kern; vice-commodore, B. B. Barber; rear-commodore, W. Gilbert; secretary, P. Augustine; assistant-secretary, D. Uber; treasurer, G. W. H. Bosler; measurers—G. Chadderton, D. Uber and J. Doerr; trustees—B. B. Barber, O. F. Kern, S. Nield, G. W. H. Bosler and J. Doerr.

MATCHES MADE.—An agreement has been entered into by the Palisade Boat Club, Yonkers, and the Nyack Rowing Association to row the following races: June 2, four-oared shells, at Yonkers; July 7, double-sculls, Nyack; Aug. 4, single-sculls, Yonkers; Sept. 1, eight-oared shells, Nyack. The distance in all the races will be a mile and a half, straightaway, and National Association rules will govern.

THE NAUTILUS BOAT CLUB of Hamilton, Ont., have elected the following officers: President, P. Dewey; first vice-president, F. J. Harrison; second vice-president, H. Carscallen; treasurer, L. E. Hatzfield; secretary, C. W. Graham; executive committee—A. McAllister, A. Campbell, J. Mills, J. Stewart and J. Dillon; rowing committee—F. J. Nelson, W. Ferris and W. Wark.

AN OARSMAN DEAD.—George W. Colvin of Browning, Ill., died at Helena, Ark., March 15. Attracted by the news of the flood, he had gone there with his brother, believing they could gather a rich harvest trapping, and was seized with pneumonia, brought on by exposure. He rowed several single-scull races, the last being with H. Parker, who defeated him on Creve Cœur Lake, near St. Louis, May 27, 1882.

THE Pacific Yacht Club, at a meeting held at the Palace Hotel, San Francisco, Cal., March 7, elected the following officers: Commodore, J. Macdonough; vice-commodore, Philip Caduc; measurer, J. C. Kelly; secretary, W. R. Melville. On the following day Commodore Macdonough started on a European trip.

THE MISSISSIPPI VALLEY AMATEUR ROWING ASSOCIATION will hold their annual regatta this year on Lake Calumet, Pullman, Ill., Friday and Saturday, July 27, 28. The association, we learn, are desirous of having Hanlan and Ross row a match-race then; failing in that, they will endeavor to arrange for a two-mile race between Hanlan and Plaisted.

THE POTOMAC B. C. of Washington, D. C., are doing all they can thus early to get the best crews at the Capital for the senior and junior fours this season. They have good material, and if they take good advice and closely follow the same, as other clubs there have done, there is no reason why they should not come very near succeeding.

SHAWMUT ROWING CLUB.—The officers of this Boston club for the year commencing April 1 are as follow: President, J. S. Mahoney; treasurer, J. T. Macarthy; recording secretary, T. B. Horgan; financial secretary, C. H. Drummond; board of trustees—A. C. Haley, J. T. Furlong, and James Comer.

THE NEW steam-yacht meteor, lying at the foot of Market street, East River, this city, was opened to public inspection March 17, and during that and the following day visitors were charged ten cents apiece, for the benefit of the sufferers by the floods in Ohio.

THE NEWTON BOAT CLUB of Boston, Mass., comprising fifty-five members, last week elected the following officers: President, William S. Farley; vice-president, George Coffin; captain, F. T. Burdett; secretary, George C. Brown; treasurer, H. C. Churchill.

AN INJUNCTION having been denied parties who made application to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to restrain the Columbia Boat Club of Washington from going on with the contemplated improvements to their boat-house, the work will be pushed forward as rapidly as possible.

COMMODORE JOHN P. THOMAS, Portland Yacht Club, has had built at the shop of F. J. Griffin of Portland, Me., a handsome centreboard sloop, the dimensions of which are as follow: Length over all, 29 feet; on water-line, 23 feet; beam, 9 feet.

THE different boat-clubs of the District of Columbia will throw open their houses by the river-side shortly after All Fools' Day. The clubs have got to do their best to keep the Evening Star Cup among them. The Columbias hold it now.

THE NARRAGANSETTS of Providence, R. I., purpose erecting a new and commodious boat-house this Spring. It will be located near the spot where stood the grand-stand at the time of the memorable scullers' regatta in 1880.

THE Delaware Boat Club of the Northside, Chicago, Ill., will, it is stated, join the Mississippi Valley Rowing Association and be represented by a four-oared crew at the regatta at Pullman.

HANLAN says he will reply definitely to Hamm and Conley's challenge after he consults Lee. If they accept, the race cannot be rowed before August, as he rows Kennedy May 30, and he wants to give Ross a race before doubling with anyone.

THE CREW of the Minnesota Boat Club, which in 1881 and 1882 made their mark on Western racing courses, have disbanded, and it is doubtful if the club will be represented by a four in any of the big regattas this year.

DURING the Winter considerable damage was done to the grounds of the Pacific Yacht Club, at Saucelito, Cal., which are now undergoing repairs. The walks are being improved and a new float will be built.

ED. HANLAN, says a dispatch from Toronto, Ont., was to have left that place March 20 for Washington, D. C., in order to obtain suitable rowing water on which to prepare for his race with Kennedy, who is already there.

GEORGE LEE is expected back from England about April 10, and will, it is anticipated, do considerable rowing during the season.

THE BIG RACE of the season on the quiet Potomac will be that in eight-oared shells between the Potomacs and Columbias. There is a chance for the Analostans to come in.

THE Carroll Institute Rowing Association threaten to take a hand in anything that looks like a regatta on the Potomac this year.

THE New Haven Yacht Club held a meeting March 14, at which P. D. Billard was elected commodore and James G. Beecher vice-commodore.

THE COMMAND of Jay Gould's new yacht has, we understand, been offered to Captain Sargent, commander of the steamship Indiana, of the American line.

THE Stockton (Cal.) Yacht Club has consolidated with the Amity Boat Club.

THE Crescent Boat Club of Boston, Mass., will hold a ball at Oddfellows' Hall March 26.

JOHN A. KENNEDY, while training for his race with Ed. Hanlan, will locate at Cumberland's boat-house, on the Potomac.

CRICKET.

CHESS ITEM.—On Thursday, March 8, Messrs. Mackenzie and Delmar visited the Danites Club of Brooklyn, on the occasion of the second March meeting of the club, at the residence of Mr. Whitlock, when the Captain played a game with Mr. Thayer, and Mr. Delmar one with Professor Raymond, the latter game being drawn. On the 15th Captain Mackenzie was present at a reception given him by the Paul Morphy Club of Brooklyn, at the residence of their president, Dr. Burdick, on Gates avenue, when he played against fifteen members of the club, including Phil Richardson, the Captain by brilliant play winning every game within two hours. On the 19th the Captain played against eighteen players at the Manhattan Club, this city, and lost only one game, which was won by J. T. Finley. Two were drawn by Messrs. Hill and Hartshorne.

THE ANNUAL MEETING of the Germantown Club was held March 14, when the following officers were elected: President, Thomas McKean; vice-president, Samuel Welsh Jr.; secretary, F. M. Bissell; treasurer, Alexander W. Wister; directors—William C. Morgan Jr., William H. Castle, Alfred Cope, William Brockie Jr. and Lewis W. Wister. The Germantown Club, which was organized in August, 1854, now numbers: Senior members, 182; junior members, 101; contributing members, 108; honorary members, 5; making an aggregate of 396.

WHEN SHE IS DEAREST.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

When Kate is sad, when Kate is pensive,
'Tis then, I think, I love her best;
All gayety becomes offensive,
And mirth a matter to detest.
And I am charmed with melancholy—
I take to tears and grief with zest,
While pleasure seems but childish folly,
And only dolts, I hold, are jolly.
And not for worlds would I be glad—
'Though all that worlds contain I had—
When Kate is sad!

When Kate is glad, when Kate is merry,
'Tis then I love her best, I say;
All sombre thoughts I quickly bury,
While laughter chases gloom away,
And life appears so very jolly
That work itself is merely play;
While as for brooding melancholy—
But dolts, I hold, indulge such folly!
For me, 'though I the toothache had—
And had it bad—I'd not be sad
When Kate is glad!

Now, either sad or either merry,
The one or other Kate must be;
And so, although her mood may vary,
She's always dearest unto me;
She's dearest when I find her pensive,
She's dearest when she laughs in glee!
Was ever love more comprehensive,
Or ever lover less offensive?
So, let the world be gay or sad,
There is nothing it can take or add
When Kate is glad.

TRANSLATED FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER FROM THE FRENCH OF EUGENE DE MIRECOURT,

BY DUDLEY WINTHROP MOORE.

CHAPTER I—THE WALK ON THE STRAND.

After having been for several centuries an object of incessant quarrels between the kings of France and the princes of Aragon, the kingdom of Naples had remained positively under the Spanish sceptre. The victory of Charles V over Francis I consolidated the conquest of Ferdinand the Catholic, and the government of this new possession of Spain was entrusted to viceroys whose absolutism weighed upon the people, and gave rise to one of the most rapid and startling revolutions that history has chronicled on its pages.

Don Louis de Haro had just succeeded, under Philip IV, his uncle Olivares in the office of Prime-minister. He gave the vice-royalty of Naples to Don Rodrique Ponce de Leon, Duke of Arcos, one of his tools, and this new master soon signalized his administration by onerous taxes, with which he crushed the poor classes.

On July 6, 1647, at a late hour of the afternoon, two women escaped secretly from the Vicaria Palace, the ancient residence of the Kings of the Two Sicilies, which bears to-day the name of Castel Capuano, and serves as a court of justice to modern Naples. Having descended some private stairs and passed through long, dark corridors, they reached a sort of postern, of which one of them had the key. An old Spanish soldier, leaning gloomily upon his halberd, stood sentry by this postern. He started on hearing the key turn in the lock, straightened himself quickly, twisted up the ends of his moustache, and saluted the two women with an air of recognition and with some gallantry that did not quite harmonize with his gray beard.

"'Tis well, Huesca; I am pleased with you," said the one who had just opened the postern. "But be discreet—remain here till we return."

"Have no fear, Dame Pedrilla, and rely on me at all times and in all places," replied the Spaniard.

Having expressed himself with this assurance, and perceiving that the other woman had her back turned, he instantly took advantage of this favorable opportunity to seize the hand of his interlocutor and raise it affectionately to his lips.

But, unfortunately, the companion of Dame Pedrilla turned suddenly and observed the kiss. She was a young girl of eighteen years, dressed in the picturesque costume of the Neapolitan bourgeoise. Ashamed of letting himself be caught in the very act, the Spanish soldier wheeled about on his left heel, while Dame Padrilla blushed up to the whites of her eyes. The young girl smiled softly at the embarrassment of the superannuated lovers, and made no unkind remark.

"Come, quick, nurse!" she said, taking the arm of Dame Pedrilla, whom she hurried away far from the postern.

They entered a labyrinth of narrow and hilly streets, paved with blackish flagstones, and where the people of Naples were beginning to flock from all parts after a scorching day.

In every group could be noticed a certain agitation that was unusual, and the cause of which the women seemed to be acquainted with, for they quickened their steps with an anxious air, and hastened to leave the centre of the crowd. After ten minutes' walk they descended a steep slope and found themselves on the port. Clutching suddenly her nurse's arm, the young girl exclaimed:

"What did I see? Ah! Heavens! Look!"

With her finger she pointed out to Dame Pedrilla a whole row of Spanish galleys sailing in the gulf, and whose brilliant flags fluttered in the evening breeze.

"It is the fleet of Don Juan Fernandez. He comes!" she added in a voice trembling with emotion.

"Mercy on me! Let us return to the palace, my dear child—let us return at once, or we are lost!"

"Why so?" said the young girl, who seemed to recover a little from her first fright.

"You ask me?" replied the old woman with amazement.

"Undoubtedly. What have we to fear?"

"Why, your intended will land in a moment, and the Viceroy will necessarily have you summoned."

"Well, Inez has my orders; I am unwell; my apartments are closed to all."

"Isabella, my daughter, reflect well! In so grave a circumstance as that of the arrival of your intended, the Viceroy will surely insist; he will wish to see you and speak with you."

"Not at all. Inez will say that I am asleep, and my father will take care not to disturb my repose."

The daughter of the Duke of Arcos—for it is indeed she whom we find thus running the streets of Naples in the dress of a bourgeoise—took her nurse's arm again, and traversed the whole length of the quay.

They soon left the city and passed along that part of the strand which has received the name of Margellina.

Isabella did not reply at first to the pitiable exclamations of the duenna, whose face was pale, and who was trembling from head to foot for fear.

"We are lost!" she repeated, with despair, "we are lost!"

"Dear, dear! you put me out of patience," said the young girl finally, stopping short and stamping her foot. "I answer for all the unpleasantness that may occur unexpectedly. So, be silent!"

Dame Pedrilla sighed.

"Come, my daughter, let us not get vexed, but reason a little. I have never given you any but wise and prudent advice."

"True, nurse, and I take pleasure in following it, unless it be too prudent and too wise. You made me pledge myself to-day to return from our walk sooner than usual, because of the disturbance of this morning. We shall return before dark, I assure you. By-the-way, what is this disturbance? My father has held counsel all day long, and I have not been able to ask him for an explanation."

Isabella evidently sought to turn the conversation and divert her nurse from her fears, and she succeeded.

"I thought you received the particulars of this affair," said Pedrilla.

"From whom could I have received them? You alone of all my women left the palace to advise Huesca to have himself placed on guard at the postern, as he has been in the habit of doing ever since we began our secret walks. Now, it seems that it took a long time to find him, for you did not return until I was ready to depart."

Isabella uttered this last phrase with a little malicious and sly air, which did not escape Dame Pedrilla.

She feigned not to comprehend, and said:

"True, my search must have seemed long to you, but the principal cause of my delay was the crowd that obstructed the approaches to the Vicaria.

"The people are, then, dissatisfied with my father?"

"Yes. But the Viceroy laughs at them, and he is right."

"Not at all; he is wrong," said Isabella.

"Indeed! it would be too ridiculous to trouble one's self about the clamor of such clowns—a heap of drunkards and tatterdemalions, the whole lot of whom are not worth a maravedi!"

"Silence! You know I do not like such talk."

"I know it, indeed. Corinne's brother, your handsome fisherman, teaches you doctrines, and presents all these *lasaroni to you as little saints, when there is not one of them that does not deserve the gibbet."

"And what if they are driven to crime by the harshness shown them, much to their misery?"

"Nonsense," said Pedrilla.

"We will never understand each other on that matter, nurse. Come, tell me, what was the cause of the disturbance?"

"This morning, on the market-place, a peasant-woman carrying a basket of fruit could not pay her tax, so the custom-house officers seized her wares and drove her away."

"Poor woman!"

"She should have remained at home, then," said Pedrilla.

"To take away her fruit!—the only resource she had, perhaps, to keep her from starving."

"Bah! It was a got-up thing! The confiscation of the fruit had scarcely taken place when a whole horde of tatterdemalions took up the woman's defense, pillaged the Receiver's office and rushed towards Saint Domingo's Church, where the Viceroy was attending mass. They waited for him at the entrance, surrounded him, giving vent to terrible exclamations, and wrung from him by dint of threats the promise to abolish the tax on fruit."

"By dint of threats? You are sure of it?"

"So I suppose. Are they capable of acting otherwise? As soon as he had returned to the palace the Viceroy had his guards charge all this rabble, and now the tax flourishes better than ever."

"After having promised. Is it possible?" said the young girl.

"Yes, certainly. They went away howling. A rightful tax is still in force."

"A rightful tax? that is the question," said Isabella with a sigh. "But let us make haste. I am curious to know what our friends think of all these things."

"What!" exclaimed Pedrilla, "you intend to go as far as the fisherman's hut this evening?"

"Indeed, I do."

"You don't dream of such a thing, my daughter! If you once get into conversation with Corinne and her brother, you will never finish. The sun is already sinking; to let ourselves be overtaken by night would be unpardonable, for the streets of Naples will not be safe after all the excitement of the day."

"What matters it? We will have someone accompany us back. Moreover, our alarm on the score of the arrival of Don Juan Fernandez has no foundation whatever, for are not all Spanish vessels subject to a quarantine?"

"True, indeed," replied Pedrilla. "I did not think of it."

"You see that we can go as far as the hut. It is more than a week since I saw poor Corinne."

"My daughter! my daughter! is it really on Corinne's account that we so often take these walks on the strand? Is it really for Corinne that a lady of Spain, that Isabella of Arcos, tramples under foot all the rules of etiquette, and muffles herself up in a costume unworthy of her rank and birth?"

"And for whom, then?" asked the young girl, coloring up.

"Take care! Take care!" said the duenna. "One has little experience at your age. There are snares that one little suspects, and our fisherman is fair-spoken. His nets are not only dangerous to the fishes of the bay."

"I do not understand you, Dame Pedrilla," said Isabella, drawing herself up proudly and giving the nurse a look of outraged dignity.

The latter perceived the bad effect of her remonstrance, and stammered:

"Pardon me, my dear child. I do not mean to say—no! assuredly, such a thought never entered my head! But, no matter! The Devil is cunning. Young and old let themselves be caught in his ambushes every day."

"Yes, so I perceived just now on leaving the postern," remarked Isabella coldly.

It was the nurse's turn to blush.

"Dear me!" she replied. "Am I, then, responsible for the stupid actions of this foolish Huesca? Is it my fault if he torments me to marry him? Since he is in the secret of your frequent rambles I am obliged to manage him carefully, my daughter, and your remark is not kind."

"You are quite right, in fact," said Isabella; "I am wrong for not thanking you for this great devotion."

The cloud that had darkened her brow vanished all at once, and she gave vent to a peal of joyous laughter.

"Come, let us bear each other no ill-will," she said to her nurse, holding out her hand. "You know I am a very capricious child, with whom remonstrances have little success. I forgive you, but never refer to that again!"

Pedrilla kissed the hand which her mistress extended to her, but all the while secretly promising herself to scold the Gothic lover who had so thoughtlessly compromised her.

Peace once established and all the alarming thoughts banished, the daughter of the Viceroy began to run over the fine sand of the shore, happy as a boarding-school girl out of her cell, gay as the lark escaped from the snares of the hunter, light as a goat that has broken its tether. From time to time she stopped to allow the duenna to catch up with her; then she contemplated the majestic sight that offered itself to her view on all hands.

Before her the azure bay showed the little verdant islands of Procida, Ischia and Capri, three lovely emeralds placed there expressly to break the uniformity of this sapphirine ocean. To the left Vesuvius lifted up her majestic summit, which the setting sun crowned with a diadem of gold and fire. Behind her Naples spread herself out like an amphitheatre on the slope of the mountain; Naples, this fragment of heaven fallen inadvertently upon earth; Naples, the ever-laughing city, whose feet are bathed by the most beautiful sea in the world, and who hides her head like a dryad under the shades of Pausilippo.

CHAPTER II.—THE STORM.

The Viceroy's daughter possessed all the charms of the Spanish woman coupled with the gracefulness and sprightly character of the Frenchwoman. Deprived of her mother from the cradle, and thoughtlessly neglected by the Duke of Arcos, whom ambition devoted to other cares, she had acquired habits of absolute independence. In the regulation of her conduct she consulted caprice rather than reason. Either for want of energy or through an excess of affection, the Viceroy left his daughter about absolute mistress, to do as she chose, which explains to us the singular situation in which we find Isabella from the beginning of this story. Weary of the reserve of the little court of Naples, which naturally modeled itself according to the court of Madrid, the young girl had turned her back on her serious and grim maids of honor to seek a society more in bearing with her ideas and tastes.

It must not, however, be inferred from the foregoing that Isabella of Arcos was one of those light women who drive from their minds all sense of propriety to abandon themselves to the current of foolish impressions and dangerous fancies. Far from it. Isabella was a noble soul, upright and pure. The blanks in her education gave to her acts some originality, perhaps, and that which was unexpected, but she never rendered them culpable. Briefly, she had no other fault than that of being the daughter of the Viceroy, instead of belonging to some plain and worthy family of the people, where that which seemed strange in her would no longer have appeared but a union of adorable traits—joyous vivacity, a charming flow of spirits, unalterable gayety.

During the three years that the Duke of Arcos had ruled over the people of Naples, more than once had the plaints and cries of distress reached the ears of Isabella and touched her heart. Learning that these painful lamentations came from the people, she had taken pity on them; she had wished to study their sufferings close by, to acquaint herself with their miseries, and this was one of the motives of her mysterious walks beyond the palace. Her two confidants were Dame Pedrilla and a frolicsome young Castilian girl, Inez by name, the same who at that moment was enacting the role of Cerberus at the door of the apartments in order that no one should notice the absence of Isabella.

Always dressed in a costume that made it impossible to recognize her, the daughter of the Viceroy ran the steep and gloomy streets of Naples, endless stairs that one must by turns ascend and descend. Formerly, she was wont to mix with the laboring classes of the port, and wherever any misery presented itself Dame Pedrilla drew forth a purse, and a few Spanish ducats slipped into the hand of the unfortunate one, who scarcely found time to bless his benefactress, so quickly did she disappear to avoid all token of his gratitude. But Isabella's charity sought out especially that class of fishermen who lived at that time out of the city, and whose poor huts, scattered over the Margellina, betrayed deep poverty, absolute destitution.

One day, on leaving one of these huts, her heart filled with pleasure and emotion, for she had just saved a whole family from a ruinous confiscation. Isabella evinced the desire to take a sail on the bay and to go to Procida for oranges. She and Pedrilla approached the shore at once, and requested a young fisherman who was mending his nets upon the strand to take them in his boat and conduct them to the island.

"Willingly," replied the young man, without interrupting his work. "The sea is fine, and I was intending to take my sister Corinne for a sail to-day. So, if you will please go as far as my hut yonder and bring Corinne with you, we will leave at once."

Isabella ran in the direction indicated by the fisherman, and returned soon, accompanied by a tall, handsome girl, with serious brow and proud eyes, who resembled a princess disguised in the poor clothing of a woman of the people,

On seeing her the fisherman rose.

"Good-evening, Corinne," he said.

"Good-evening, brother," replied the girl, offering at the same time her handsome brow to the young man's lips. "You have had poor luck fishing, I see."

"Yes, Corinne. Yet I caught a magnificent salmon; but he broke the net just as I was about to draw him into my boat. He regained his liberty, and that will cost me two days' work. I don't complain. When the slave breaks his chain the master suffers by it, as is but just. Did Dom Francesco come?"

"Yes, brother; he left this letter for you."

The young fisherman took the paper which Corinne held out to him, respectfully doffed his woolen cap, and thoughtfully read the contents of the letter,

"Dom Francesco," he said, "cannot come before a week, and he invites me to pay him a visit to-morrow at his convent. Can he be ill?"

"Alas!" said Corinne, "this new misfortune would be all we would need."

"No, reassure yourself. I recollect that he was to lock himself up, to put the last stroke to his great work, and submit it to the court of Rome? But your face is sad, Corinne. What ails you? I do not ask after Pietro, for he promised yesterday to come to see you, and he has doubtless kept his promise."

"Pietro was seriously wounded last night by the soldiers of the Viceroy," replied Corinne painfully.

"Heaven! what do you tell me?"

"His father himself came to inform me of this fatal occurrence. I went up at once to their hut and dressed the wound."

"Good girl! your presence must have been a salutary balm for him. You were guided by your heart in this step, but I am none the less obliged to you for it. Thanks."

He took Corinne by the hand and drew her aside from the two strangers.

"Do you care much for the sail I promised you?" he asked in a whisper. "Do you not think it would be better for me to go and see the wounded man?"

"No, for he is sleeping. Moreover, there is no money in the house; all of Pietro's goods have been confiscated, and he himself is without money. On my part, I was not able to go to the market at Naples. It is going to take you two days to repair your nets. How will we live till then? The two persons you are to take to the island will, of course, reward you for your obligingness."

"You are right, sister; let us strive before all to keep ourselves from starving."

His boat was moored to the shore. He picked up the nets and unfastened the mooring, while Corinne went and took the hands of Isabella and Pedrilla to help them into the craft. He spread his triangular sail, placed his hand on the rudder, and the light skiff, swimming over the bay, sped towards Procida.

During the conversation between the brother and sister before leaving the shore Isabella was struck, as it is readily believed, with certain words uttered by Corinne. She wished to know why her father's soldiers had wounded on the previous night a man in whom the two companions of their sail seemed to take such a lively interest. She hesitated a long time before questioning them. The brother was gloomy, the sister pensive; neither appeared disposed to keep up a conversion. Isabella, however, endeavored to break the silence.

"Will you find me indiscreet," she said to the young man, "if I ask you your name? I have several friends for whom I should like to procure in their turn a sail on the bay, and I will send you a message the day before I should like to give them this pleasure."

"My name is Thomas Aniello," replied the fisherman. "However, as my comrades of the strand have made but one name of the two, I am called on all sides, on the shore, and at Naples, Masaniello. When it pleases you to notify me a day in advance, you will certainly find me at your orders, senora."

"Why do you call me senora?" said Isabella.

"Because you have the Spanish accent. Besides, you addressed just now a few words in Castilian to the person with you."

"Ah!" said Isabella, with confusion, "you understand Castilian?"

"Yes," rejoined Masaniello. "The slave should always know how to speak the language of his masters. By that means one can serve them better when they are good and demand justice of them better when they are oppressors."

A bright flush overspread the young girl's cheeks. At the moment when Masaniello and Corinne were speaking of their affairs she had, indeed, said to her nurse:

"What a pity that this handsome young man wears the woolen cap and wretched hempen smock-frock of the sailors of the port! There would not be a more perfect cavalier at court."

So she was extremely embarrassed on learning that Masaniello had understood this remark when she had thought to conceal it from him under the veil of her mother-tongue. Nevertheless, as the young man maintained his grave air, and seemed to set little value on the opinion of the stranger in regard to his person, Isabella resumed:

"I am indeed Spanish, and my father has an officer's modest position in the troops of the Viceroy. I was therefore very much grieved just now to learn that some soldiers, under the command, perhaps, of my father, had wounded a person whom you appear to esteem and cherish. Acquaint me with the place where the attack occurred, and the corps to which they belong, and I pledge you my word they shall be punished."

"These soldiers executed the orders given them, senora," said the fisherman, "so they are not guilty. It is not these docile instruments of tyranny we must blame, but the tyranny itself.

"The Viceroy?" stammered the young girl with agitation.

"You have said it, senora; the Viceroy!"

"What have you to reproach him for?"

"I reproach him for crushing the people with taxes."

"But he acts in the name of Spain, therefore he is not the one you must accuse?"

"I do accuse him! Spain is too much interested in the preservation of her conquest not to disown a fatal administration, an infamous despotism that will some day force the people of Naples to revolt."

"What do you say? Good Heavens!"

"Senora, you will share my opinion when you have heard of Pietro's affair," replied the fisherman bitterly.

"I listen," said Isabella excitedly.

The skiff was sailing then on the open bay. A northeast wind filled the sail and drove the little vessel directly towards its destination. Masaniello left the rudder and came and took a seat beside Corinne, who listened in silence while she occupied herself with making a few repairs in the broken meshes of the net.

"Pietro," began the fisherman, "is the comrade of my boyhood. Both of us were born in Amalfi and last year he came to Naples to endeavor to secure through his work an existence that would shelter him from want. But in Naples work produces but discouragement, and even brings on ruin."

"How so?" interposed Isabella.

"You will learn it," rejoined the fisherman. "Pietro had to support his old father. At first he worked on the port as day-laborer, in order to acquire the means wherewith to build a boat. He succeeded by dint of privations and fatiguing toil, and came and took up his abode in a hut beside mine. But almost at the same moment the Viceroy promulgated two edicts, one after the other. It was proclaimed that every fisherman proprietor of a launch should pay a yearly tax of sixty silver reals. The second specified that all the huts built upon the shore would be liable to a tax of from twenty to thirty ducats, in accordance with their size and importance. So both of us, Pietro and I, had to pay annually to the treasury some two hundred reals; that is to say, much more than the sale of our fish yields a year.

"Horrors! And why did you not present this fact to the Viceroy?"

"The Viceroy closes his ears on complaints, and seeks only to gorge himself with our spoils. He has a salary of one hundred thousand ducats, and he sends every year to Spain thirty ships, each carrying three million piastres. Calculate the enormousness of the sum! It is the people of Naples who sweat for this gold!"

Isabella turned pale and kept silent.

"When the hour arrived to pay the tax," resumed the young man, "God allowed me to be ready, for Corinne is a saintly and courageous girl, who rises every morning before daybreak to go and sell her fruit at the market of Naples. This business has not yet been taxed. Fruit is about the sole nourishment of the people; they fear to attack them in their very existence. Oh! if ever the delirium of the despots went so far ——!"

Corinne raised her beautiful, sad face, and looked at her brother.

"The tax upon fruit will be promulgated this week," she said; "they assured us so yesterday at the market."

"Good Heavens! Why, it is impossible!" exclaimed the daughter of the Viceroy.

"Everything is possible to the insane power that closes its eyes to the light," said Masaniello. "God Almighty wishes to destroy the powerful; he smites them with vertigo. But let us return to Pietro's story. So I had my two hundred reals; but he, unfortunate man, was far from that sum. He threw himself in tears at the feet of the treasury-officers, who were carrying off his furniture, and besought them to leave at least his old father's bed. As they refused, he was seized with rage, and I arrived just in time to prevent his committing a murder, for he already had his musket aimed at them. Now, if he had committed this murder, would you have thought him very guilty?"

"No," replied Isabella.

"What are you dreaming of, my child?" stammered Dame Pedrilla, with terror.

"No, by all means, no!" repeated the Viceroy's daughter. "The crime belongs to them that drive the people to despair."

"That is my opinion," said the young fisherman coldly; "and when I arrested Pietro's arm I said to him: 'Patience, brother! those are not the ones we must punish!' His boat was seized like the rest. He was too discouraged to resort again to the hard work of the port, and a fisherman's calling had become impossible for him; he could turn either smuggler or brigand. Of two evils, one chooses the lesser; he became a smuggler. Do you think him less honest for that?"

"No," said Isabella once more.

"Thanks, senora, thanks!" said Corinne, grasping the young girl's hands with effusion, and giving her a sweet look, full of gratitude. "Pietro is my intended; I love him! Your reply does my heart good."

"O my father, my father!" thought the daughter of the Duke of Arcos "why cannot you hear what I hear!"

"This poor fellow," resumed Corinne, "received a sword-thrust yesterday from one of the guards of the Chiamonte gate because he tried to smuggle into the city a few pounds of tobacco and a few bottles of liquor. His goods were taken from him, with thirty maravedis, his earnings of three days; then he was left for dead. The coolness of the night brought him to his senses again, and he dragged himself to his hut in a dying condition, where I placed the first bandage on his wound."

"Do you believe now, senors," resumed the fisherman, "that fifty thousand men of the people, reduced like Pietro to a baleful extremity, may not rise up at any moment to wipe out in their turn those who have crushed them up to this time?"

"I believe," returned Isabella, "that the Duke of Arcos, once better informed as to what is taking place, will anticipate the revolt by doing justice to the people and relieving them of the weight of the taxes."

"Heaven hears you!" said the fisherman.

He returned to the rudder.

They were approaching the island, and the moment had come to round certain rocks hidden by sea-plants, with which this part of the coast is strewn.

Ten minutes afterwards Isabella sprang nimbly ashore and took Masaniello's sister by the hand to lead her under the refreshing shades of Procida.

In vain did Dame Pedrilla represent to her in a low tone of voice the impropriety of making herself familiar with a woman of so common an extraction; the Viceroy's daughter, as was her wont, paid no attention to what the nurse said, and imposed silence on her rather brusquely.

An hour later Isabella and Corinne returned to the seashore laden with oranges bought of the peasant-women of the island.

Masaniello had remained in the boat.

They saw him from the distance waving a strip of sail. It was a signal of distress. The wind had chopped round to the south, and a black cloud on the horizon announced a squall.

"Quick! quick!" he cried so soon as they were within earshot. "The sky is threatening, the waves are beginning to rise. Let us make haste, or I will not answer for our safety!"

"Mercy on us!" exclaimed Dame Pedrilla, crossing herself. "Perhaps it would be better for us to remain on the island."

"You are crazy, nurse. And what if the storm should continue to-morow?"

"Alas!" said the duenna, with a sigh.

"Make up your mind," put in Masaniello. "As for Corinne and me, we will go all the same. There is a poor wounded man yonder who awaits our visit and assistance."

"Then you do not think there is any danger?" queried the Viceroy's daughter.

The fisherman again questioned the horizon with his eyes.

"I think there will be a storm; but we will face it, will we not, Corinne?"

"Yes, brother."

"And I, also!" cried Isabella spiritedly, springing into the boat. "Why should I have less courage than you?"

"My child! my child! it is folly!" exclaimed Dame Pedrilla despairingly.

"Remain, then," said the fisherman to the duenna, "and let us make haste!"

Isabella advanced to the side of the boat, and, holding out her hand to her nurse, said in an imperious tone:

"Come! I command you!"

Dame Pedrilla obeyed, but she seriously believed her last hour had come. She drew her rosary from her pocket and began to invoke all the saints of Heaven.

Quite a heavy wind was whistling from the South. The cloud, which had been at first scarcely perceptible, grew visibly larger, and slowly spread its dark wings.

"Let us go," cried Corinne's brother.

The boat darted through the water, and almost at the same time a peal of distant thunder made Dame Pedrilla turn pale and increase her invocations to the Virgin and Saint January.

"Two at both ends of the boat!" cried the fisherman.

Isabella hastened to take a seat beside him, saying:

"If you need me for anything, I am strong and composed; do not fear to call me to your assistance."

"Very well," replied Masaniello; "you are as brave as Corinne. Be easy; I answer for you."

The promise seemed a little venturesome with such a light vessel, and in the face of alarming squalls which announced a storm much more violent than the pilot had expected. The sun had disappeared; the sea wore that greenish hue which evidences a great disorder in its unfathomable depths. In passing over the heads of our temporary sailors, the gull sent forth its shrill cries, and the waves burst into foam on striking the sides of the boat.

Isabella contemplated the young fisherman with a sort of enthusiasm. Never had she seen a face more noble, an eye more fearless. In this solemn moment his physiognomy did not betray the least emotion. He had taken off his smock-frock to allow himself more liberty in his movements, and was guiding the helm with a sure and firm hand, while Corinne, intrepid as himself, regulated, on the other end, the evolutions of the sail, keeping it well up to the wind, that the very violence of the storm might render their course more rapid.

"How is it," said Isabella to Masaniello, "that you follow a fisherman's calling when you could aspire to a more lucrative and less dangerous vocation?"

"Because I am more at liberty," replied the young man; "because, under the rule of foreigners, I do not see in Naples a single calling I can exercise without blushing."

"What do you say?"

"When the poor man gives up living by the work of his hands, he has but two careers open to him—he must either become a domestic or enter the military service. Now, the former is the worst of slaves; his occupation debases and blights."

"Undoubtedly," said Isabella. "But the service?"

"The service!" quoth Masaniello—"a holy vocation when it calls you to deliver your country, but a cowardly and dishonorable one when it serves to oppress!"

There was a moment's silence. The heavy cloud rose higher and higher, and was rent from time to time by the sharp lightning.

"Oh!" resumed the fisherman, "only one profession would have smiled on me, the noblest and most independent of all—the arts! Twenty times in this very boat has Salvator Rosa, the celebrated painter, the fine genius, reproduced under my eyes the majestic sites around us. I have seen him take the secrets of the tempest by surprise, and I have made the storm pose, as it were, before him! What he crayoned out on vellum I found again within me, and I would have had, I feel it, all the grand inspirations of the artist!"

"Well, then," said Isabella, "why did you not become his pupil?"

"I am satisfied with being his friend. Education came to me too late. Salvator advised me, like you, to enter the service; but he understood my repugnance—for he also cherishes the love of liberty and nurses the hatred of despotism. 'To serve in the Viceroy's troops?' I said to him: 'Rather would I suffer misery, rather would I suffer hunger, rather would I suffer death!'"

"Then you hate the Viceroy very much?"

"I hate injustice and tyranny!"

Isabella sighed.

"But what proves that the Viceroy is unjust?"

"His acts."

"Perhaps he is not aware of the sufferings of the people."

"Then he is all the more culpable. The first duty of a potentate is to enlighten himself through his own inquisitions, and not to put faith in the flatterers and intriguers surrounding him."

"You are right," said Isabella with another sigh.

They exchanged these words amidst the peal of thunder and the roar of the billows, which the frail skiff rode for an instant, to be plunged anew into the deep trough of the sea and threatened every moment with being swallowed up.

"So I remain a fisherman," pursued Masaniello. "When I am alone in my boat in the midst of this immensity I am free! I forget men and their crimes. Face to face with God, I listen to His voice, that speaks to my heart, I penetrate into the eternal designs of His providence, and He shows me the future that shall be the end of our miseries. I catch a glimpse of another world, of a better class of people, where might will no longer crush the weak, where the rich will hold out their hands to the poor, and where the word FRATERNITY, this evangelical and celestial device, will be stamped everywhere upon the banners of the nations. Leave my present calling? Why so? It was among the fishermen that Christ chose his apostles; it was the fishermen that propagated through the world His divine teachings. When Heaven wishes to instruct or punish man, it lends its light to the ignorant and its might to the weak. Who knows? the deliverance of Naples will be perhaps the work of a fisherman!"

Isabella did not hear the storm; she no longer saw the raging sea that roared about her. The contemplation of the pilot absorbed her whole soul.

"How handsome he is! how grand!" she thought.

Mansaniello was, indeed, sublime. His jet-black hair waved in the wind, the lightning, that reflected upon his brow every moment a rapid, transitory light, seeming to crown him with an aureola. It was as if the storm-king sat there.

"Brother," cried Corinne suddenly, "I can no longer manage the sail!"

* The well-known name of these half-naked men was in itself a menace to society. They were called Lazaruses, in allusion to the poor man of Scripture crouching at the door of the wicked rich man, whose dogs came and licked his sores, and who begged in vain for the crumbs fallen from the table. Of all the rallying cries that the social war has adopted at various times, this one is perhaps the most significant.—Revue des Deux Mondes.

Almost at the same instant a heavy squall made the launch sweep completely round.

"Cut the ropes!" Masaniello cried.

Corinne obeyed, and the storm bore away the sail on its furious wing.

Dame Pedrilla, more dead than alive, crouched in the bottom of the boat.

"Brother, heed me," said Corinne; "let us put into the harbor of Pozzuoli."

"You are right, sister; one should not tempt God."

The thunder pealed more terribly, and the billows rose with a roar to the clouds. Isabella, at the moment one of these living mountains seemed to descend upon her head, yielded all at once to fright and threw herself distractedly into the arms of the fisherman. At that supreme moment a sort of electric shock passed through these two young and handsome beings. The daughter of Spain and the child of the people understood that they were destined to love each other.

BASEBALL.

LEAGUE UMPIRING.

Everything has been done by the National League to insure the most satisfactory condition of things known in the history of the organization in the umpiring of the championship games of the League this season. Not only have men of known integrity of character, of education and of good social standing been induced to accept the positions of official umpires in the League for 1883, but the rules and regulations governing the umpires are such as to insure a more perfect interpretation of the rules than ever before. Besides this, measures have been taken to put a stop to the "kicking" nuisance, which has hitherto been such a barrier to fair and successful umpiring. The newly-appointed umpires of the League will shortly repair to Washington, where they will enter upon a brief but effective session of study in the League Baseball College, beginning with a course of lessons under the tuition of "Professor" Young, who has been appointed teacher of umpiring for the League. Here they will learn the correct interpretation of every playing-rule, through the medium of a series of pointed queries as to what would be their decisions in cases of every imaginary phase of play likely to occur in a game. Among the official interpretations of the playing-rules which we think are likely to be enforced by "Professor" Young in his school are those applicable to the following special rules: When a fairly-batted ball is securely held by the first-baseman, while some part of his person is touching first base, before the base-runner touches said base, the umpire must promptly declare said runner out; but if the ball is so held at the same time that the base is touched by the runner, the umpire must declare the runner not out. If there is any doubt in the mind of the umpire in regard to this point of play, it must be given in favor of the runner. In other words, the play must show that the ball was plainly held on the base before the runner reached it, or he must be decided 'not out.' In the case of catching the batsman out, the umpire must regard the ball as legally caught if it be "momentarily held" by the fielder. The latter cannot let the ball fall into his hands and then allow it purposely to drop out of them to secure an additional point of play. To obtain a double-play by refusing to accept a chance for a catch, the fielder must allow the ball to go to the ground and then secure it on the rebound. Also in the case of a long hit to the outfield, in which the outfielder, after momentarily holding the ball, allows it to rebound in the air from his hands for the purpose of delaying the catch so as to catch a runner leaving his base after the ball is caught, such checking of the progress of the ball to the ground must be regarded as "momentarily" holding the ball, and thereby catching it under the rules. The umpire must, in every case of forcing runners off bases—alike from a fair-hit ball, a base given on called balls, and from a base-runner striving to run first base on the call of "three strikes"—decide all base-runners as ceasing to be forced off the moment the base-runner from home to first base is put out by a catch or by being touched off a base, or in failing to reach first base before the ball is held there, or by failing to run to first base the moment he has hit the ball or has been given his base on called balls, or has had three strikes called on him. The umpire has but one rule to regard in the case of a base-runner failing to run back to his base on a foul ball not caught, and that is that the runner is exempt from being put out in so returning only when he runs back. If he does not run back, then he can be put out as in the case of running any ordinary base. The umpire must, however, bear in mind that the runner cannot be decided out because of his walking back. If a long ball is hit foul there is no need of his running back, and when a short ball is hit his own safety depends on his running back. In the case of a high fair or foul ball falling near the line of the bases, when a fielder goes to catch it the base-runner has no right to the line of the base, but must run outside such line, or inside of it, if necessary to avoid interference with the fielder in catching the ball; for if the runner in any way interferes with a fielder trying to catch a fly-ball from the bat the umpire must decide the runner out at once. This penalty for hindering a catch applies not in the case of a thrown ball to a fielder, but only in the case of a fly-ball from the bat. The rule, too, forbidding a runner from running three feet beyond the base-line in trying to avoid a fielder having the ball in hand and trying to touch the runner does not apply in this case of a runner having to run off the line of the base to avoid interference with the fielder trying to catch a batted ball. In calling strikes on the batsman it is the imperative duty of the umpire to be certain in the first place that the ball passed over the home-plate. There must be no doubt on the subject at all. He must see that it plainly passed over the base or no strike can be legally called. After being sure of this fact, the next thing to decide upon is the height of the ball, and whether it was high or low, as called for. He should not be so particular in regard to this point as he is in the case of its passing over the home-plate, as a ball may be a little higher or lower than exactly called for and yet be a good ball for the batsman to strike at. But if not over the plate he is not to have a strike called on him. In calling balls, too, there should be no hesitancy in calling every ball not distinctly over the plate. If there is any doubt it must be given in favor of the batsman. In regard to "block" balls, the umpire must bear in mind that no "block" can be called on a ball pitched to the batsman which passes the catcher and is stopped by the crowd behind him. The rule of a "block" ball applies only to a ball fielded to any baseman or to any fielder which goes wide of the fielder it is thrown to, and is then stopped by the crowd, or to a ball batted to the outfield and then stopped by the crowd. A block-ball, however, cannot be called if it be stopped by a tree, a building, or other obstruction to its progress. It is to be called only when stopped by persons outside of the nine players legally in the field. These are the most prominent of the rules which the official umpires will be called upon to interpret this season.

THE PROVIDENCE CLUB.

Writing from Providence under date of March 13, Harry Wright says: "Several of our players are here, and practicing every day. Richmond arrived last week, and will train with the Brown University nine. They have a large hall, and practice pitching and catching, batting and base-running every afternoon for an hour or so, and then adjourn to Brooks' Gymnasium, close by—one of the most complete in apparatus and appurtenances for all manner of exercise and muscular development in the country, splendidly located, light, bright, cheerful, and well ventilated. The Browns have a strong batting team, and their battery is first-class. Should their fielding skill be at all in proportion, they will prove strong claimants for college championship honors. They will play a number of games with the Providence Club. The Providence team will have three strong batteries this season in Radbourn and Gilligan, Richmond and Nava, Smith and Robinson, with Fulmer for change-catcher. Every pleasant day during April there will be games on the Providence grounds. The Metropolitans will probably open the season here early in April. We also expect a visit from the Athletics of Philadelphia. They played us a close and exciting game last year, and, as they have strengthened their team with sev well-known players this season, two or three games in Providence would prove very interesting and attractive. That the game of baseball is well established and growing even more popular is well indicated by the general desire manifested on all sides to have the season open. Could there be a more healthful tonic or a surer relief from business cares and anxiety than the exhilaration and excitement of two hours of an afternoon in the fresh pure air at the ball grounds witnessing a good game of ball, with the exciting incidents of fine pitching and catching, the splendid hit and magnificent catch, the swift base-running and 'stealing' of bases, the accurate throwing, catching and quick handling of the ball resulting in 'outs,' and the grand 'home-run' and—victory! with a hip! hip! hurrah? That there will be an increased attendance at all the games this season I feel assured. New York and Philadelphia may expect a 'red-hot' reception and 'no quarter.' The championship of the East' must remain with Providence; Joe tart says so, and Joe is 'Old Reliable' every time."

THE AMERICAN ASSOCIATION CHAMPIONSHIP for 1882 was won by the Cincinnati Club, which thereby has the privilege of flying the pennant until the championship of 1883 is declared, in October next.

OSCAR WALKER is in Brooklyn, practicing, in readiness for his opening play in the Brooklyn Club.

WILLIAM W. HINCKEN, whose portrait is given in our baseball gallery this week, was born Sept. 25, 1854, in Philadelphia, Pa., and has been for several years prominently identified with the national game in that city, both in an official and journalistic capacity. After graduating at Nazareth College, a military institution located in Nazareth, Pa., he filled at various times important positions in the offices of the Receiver of Taxes and Recorder of Deeds in his native city, besides reporting baseball for The Sunday Dispatch, the oldest Sunday newspaper in Philadelphia, of which his father, who was one of the founders, is now the sole proprietor. He has been recognized for several years as one of the leading authorities on baseball matters in the Quaker City, and has filled the presidency of the Athletic Club for one term, and also managed the same professional organization during the season of 1879. He is honest, truthful and steadfast, and has on many occasions displayed a commendable independence in showing up the faults and failings of some of the thought-to-be immaculate professional exponents of the game. His earnest exertions on behalf of baseball, together with his thoroughly genial and courteous demeanor, have made him many friends among the players and patrons of the national game in Philadelphia and elsewhere.

THE AMERICAN ASSOCIATION MEETING.

We gave in the preceding issue of THE CLIPPER a brief summary of the salient features of the adjourned meeting of the American Association, held March 12 and 13 in St. Louis, Mo., and we now proceed to furnish a detailed account of the legislative work accomplished, together with the official schedule of championship games which was then adopted. After the report of the conference committee had been adopted, the following changes were made in the constitution: The rule made at the December convention, prohibiting American clubs from playing with League clubs, was repealed. In Article I of the constitution it was made obligatory upon a club to pay at once any fine inflicted by an umpire. Failure to do so will be visited by expulsion. In the same section an addenda was made to a rule, making it a penalty of expulsion for any nine to present on its team any player who shall have been released from any other professional club from the same city. To Article IV the following was added: "All fines imposed upon players by umpire, under the provisions of this constitution and the playing rules, must be paid to the secretary by the club to which the offending player belongs within ten days after it be imposed, the club to retain said sum or sums from the player's salary; and in none of such cases shall the umpire be permitted to remit or suspend such fine, under penalty of removal." This renders certain the payment of the fine inflicted. Article sixth was amended so as to compel the payment of the sixty-five-dollar guarantee whenever the home-club retained the gate-money whether the game is concluded or not. In this same article the provision for the visiting club to get half of the receipts on Decoration-day, Fourth-of-July and State-holidays was stricken out, and the following substituted: "Upon such days the home-club shall pay to the visiting clubs twelve and one-half cents for every person who enters the grounds to witness a championship game, exclusive of the players of the two clubs, the umpire, the ground-policemen, officers of the two clubs, and reporting members of the press." In Section 5 of Article VI the words were stricken out requiring a contract to be filed with the secretary before it became valid, and the following was substituted: "But any offer made by a club and accepted by a player, for his services in writing, either by letter or telegram, shall be final, and as binding as though said parties had entered into and executed an official contract as above specified. Provided that, at the subsequent request of either party, an official contract shall be executed, and take the place of said temporary contract." This may have an important bearing on some of the engagements made by the Brooklyn Club with players, many of which have not been completed to the extent of a regular contract; as players who have agreed to play under a mere ordinary agreement can now be held as fast as if a regular contract had been made, the penalty of failure to abide by the written assent being expulsion. The following amendment to Section 14, Article VI, will do away with one nuisance effectually: "And if any player in uniform, while on the field, shall speak to or gesticulate to any person or persons among the spectators, in any manner, so as to provoke such spectator or spectators, he shall be fined a sum not less than ten and not more than twenty-five dollars, and it shall be the duty of the umpire to impose said fine." The following new rule against kicking is a model one, and improves upon the League's rules similarly applicable: "Section 16. The umpire is the sole and absolute judge of a play. In no instance shall anyone be permitted to question the correctness of any decision by the umpire, or address him directly or indirectly as to any one of his judgments, save the two captains of the contending nines. And no other player, at such time, shall be permitted to leave his position in the field, his place at the bat, on bases, or his place on or about the player's bench, to approach the umpire, or address him in word or act concerning such disputed decision, unless requested so to do by the umpire himself. And any player who violates this rule shall be fined by said umpire $10 for each offense. And at such aforesaid time, and on such occasion, no manager or club officer other than the two captains above mentioned shall be permitted to go upon the field and enter into said dispute, under the penalty of a forfeiture of the game to the opposing club. Nor shall the umpire ever appeal to any spectator or spectators for information to guide him, but may at any time ask for such information, if he desires, from one or more of the players." A new section was added so as to keep order among the spectators at a match. It is as follows: "Every club is bound to maintain order on its own grounds and protect the umpire and the players from the insolence, insults and aggravating remarks or action of spectators. If at any time during the progress of a game any spectator uses loud, insolent, insulting and aggravating language towards a player, or by act or word, directly or indirectly, purposely annoys or excites a player, such player may appeal to the umpire for protection; and it shall be the duty of the umpire to call time and warn said offender that he will be expelled from the ground if the offense be repeated. Should the warning be not heeded, the umpire shall call upon the captain of the home-club to compel the removal from the grounds of the offender; and if said offender be not removed the umpire may declare the game forfeited to the visiting club. The umpire shall, in like form and manner, have power to protect himself and the dignity of his position from the same class of insults and annoyance." In regard to the pay of official umpires, a new rule provides that: "Each regular and substitute umpire shall be allowed all legitimate hotel and traveling expenses while on active duty, namely: Railway fares, sleeping-car fares, price of station-meals, omnibus-tickets to and from depots and hotel-bills not to exceed three dollars per day. The secretary shall pay such bills when he shall receive from the umpire receipts for hotel-bills and itemized accounts of the other expenses." In order to defray the expenses incurred under the new rules for umpires, each of the eight clubs in the championship arena has to pay $125 a month from May 6, September inclusive, or $625 for the season, payable on the 10th of each month. The rules governing membership were strengthened by the insertion of a decree that any club can be expelled when it fails to pay an assessment or fine when the same shall have become due. Myers, manager of last year's Baltimore Club, will have to pay his umpire dues to the American Association at once or be expelled. He must pay $190 by April 1 to Secretary Williams or retire from all club service. The Harrisburg Club is interested in the fact. This action was taken to prevent any recurrence of the tricks of the old Baltimore Club, which never settled its umpire assessments.

The other rules governing the umpires are: "Any umpire appointed as aforesaid shall be removed by the secretary, first, when it shall appear that said umpire is permanently unable to perform the duties; second, when any five clubs of the Association shall appeal in writing for his dismissal; when any two clubs shall certify that he has been guilty of appearing on the field in a state of intoxication, or has violated the constitution or broken the rules of this Association. When any such removal is made the secretary shall fill the vacancy at once by appointing to the place one of the substitute umpires. In the event of the temporary inability of an umpire to serve as directed by the secretary, he shall at once, on discovering such inability, telegraph the fact to the secretary under a penalty of a fine of $25 for failing to do so. Thereupon the secretary shall immediately detail one of the substitute umpires to fill the vacancy till the inability be removed. In such instances, where the regular umpire's inability to fill his engagement results from his illness, or because he failed to take the proper train when he had time, the substitute shall be paid by the secretary out of the salary of the regular, provided that this sum never exceeds half of a month's salary. No umpire shall be eligible to umpire a game of ball participated in by the club representing the city in which he shall reside, and no game shall be counted in the championship series which has not been umpired by one of the official umpires or official substitute umpires as assigned by the secretary." How will this apply in the case of Sommer, who is now said to reside at Covington, Ky.? This is practically Cincinnati, though not actually so. Moreover, he is said to be the brother of the right-fielder of the Cincinnati Club. No official umpire shall be qualified to serve until he has made affidavit before an officer authorized to take such affidavit, and has filed said affidavit with the secretary. In said affidavit he shall pledge himself to honestly, faithfully and impartially discharge his duty as official umpire of the Association, to accept no bribes, to sell no games which he shall umpire, to be influenced by no personal feelings towards any club or player, and abstain from all forms of gambling during the period of his service."

The four regular umpires and the two substitutes appointed are to meet the secretary at such place as he shall designate on the third Wednesday of April, when they will be required to carefully read over together and construe the meaning of each and every playing rule of this Association. When there be found any difference of opinion among them as to the construction of any one of said rules, the opinion of the majority shall be considered as the official construction. Such construction shall then be certified by all of the umpires in writing to the secretary, who in turn shall certify the same to each captain of every American Association club, and such official construction shall govern all games played during the season. The umpires cannot travel with or stop at the same hotel with any club of this Association; nor shall any umpire be permitted to borrow money or accept a present or loan from any player under contract with an American Association club, or from a director or stockholder of any such club, under penalty of removal.

The amendments to the playing rules included a marked improvement in the penalty for balking. The old rule—now in force in the League—gave a base on a balk only to the runner. Under the American revised code, if a pitcher now delivers the ball with his arm above his shoulder the umpire calls a balk, and the batter takes his base, as well as every base-runner another base. In overrunning first base the base-runner must turn to the right of the foul-line, or he may be put out before he returns to his base. The rule requiring pitchers to keep the arm below the hip was modified, and the twirler will hereafter be permitted to throw from the shoulder, but not above it. In plain words pitching has passed away, and throwing has become legal.

A rule was adopted that no American club shall play any outside clubs in New York or Philadelphia without the consent of the resident club; and another one to the effect that there can be only one American-alliance club in each city. The rules of the conference report are as appended:

1. That all players named in the list attached thereto shall be deemed to be members in good standing in their respective clubs until Nov. 1, unless sooner expelled or released, and no club of either association should contract with any of them prior to Oct. 10.

2. In engaging players hereafter every club shall at once notify his association's secretary of such an engagement, who in turn shall notify the secretaries of the other two associations, who in their turn shall notify the clubs of their respective bodies. All such contracts shall be held inviolate. Any player who signs or agrees to sign more than one contract with any of these clubs shall be expelled.

3. When any player shall be expelled or black-listed by any of the twenty-four clubs of the tripartite, the other clubs shall be notified in like manner as when engagements are promulgated, and the expulsion or black-listing shall bind every club of the three associations until the association which expels the player reinstates him.

4. Every club shall have the right to reserve any of its players, not to exceed eleven in number, provided they shall not force any of these players to play for less than $1,000 a year. Each club is to send in their reserve-list on Sept. 20 to the secretary of its Association, who shall distribute them to the clubs of the other associations through their secretaries. Each of the twenty-four clubs will thus be provided with the full list by Oct. 10, on which day, and not before, can any engagement be made.

5. An arbitration committee is provided for, to consist of three members from each association, which shall act upon every dispute arising over contracts and players, and whose dictum shall be final.

The conference committee of the American Association—Messrs. Caylor, Simmons and Barnie—were appointed as the American arbitration committee.

There were thirty applicants for positions as umpire, and in the following list, the names of many old professionals will be recognized: Charles F. Daniels, Hartford, Ct.; E. S. West, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Joseph Quinn, Daniel Cronin, Boston, Mass.; O. H. Butler, Washington; W. McLean, Philadelphia; John Kelly, W. H. Becannon, W. E. Horton, New York; J. J. Dailey, Brooklyn; John Dyler, Louisville; Joseph Simmons, Rochester, N. Y.; Wesley Curry, Philadelphia; C. H. Gould, R. S. Crandall, Cincinnati; James Jackson, New York; C. J. Guth, Chicago; F. G. Malone, Philadelphia; M. Walsh, Louisville; Warren White, Washington; T. G. Connell, Philadelphia; M. J. Flaherty, Worcester; W. Arthur Cummings, J. E. Bass, Brooklyn; S. J. Devinney, E. J. Mullane, J. J. Magner, St. Louis; H. J. Cox, West Newton; F. McCarton, Middletown, Ct.; B. Sommer, Covington, Ky. The following were the official umpires selected: John Kelly, New York City; W. H. Becannon, New York City, N. Y.; Charles F. Daniels, Hartford, Ct.; and Benj. Sommer, Covington, Ky., with John E. Bass of Brooklyn, N. Y., and J. J. Magner of St. Louis, Mo., as substitutes. It will be seen that the East has been favored by the election of four men, three of that number hailing from this city and vicinity, while Philadelphia, Pittsburg and Baltimore have been entirely ignored. The following is a correct schedule of the 392 championship games to be played by the eight clubs between May 1 and Oct. 1, inclusive:

Each of the eight clubs play forty-nine games at home and a like number abroad. As will be seen the scheduled season commences Tuesday, May 1, in Baltimore, Pittsburg, Cincinnati and Columbus, and closes Saturday, Sept. 29, in Cincinnati, and Sunday Sept. 30, in St. Louis, Louisville and Columbus. The Western clubs play in the East from May 29 to June 14, and from Aug. 16 to Sept. 6, inclusive, while the Eastern clubs are to play in the West from June 18 to July 8 and from Sept. 9 to Sept. 30, inclusive. On Decoration-day championship games will be played both morning and afternoon by the St. Louis Club in Pittsburg and by the Eclipse Club in Baltimore, while the Columbus and Cincinnati Clubs will alternate morning and afternoon in Philadelphia and New York City. On the Fourth-of-July, championship games will be played both morning and afternoon by the Allegheny Club in St. Louis, the Athletics in Louisville, the Metropolitans in Columbus, and the Baltimores in Cincinnati. The management of the American and League clubs in New York City and Philadelphia have arranged the schedules of the two associations so that they will conflict on only ten days in the entire championship season—on May 30, June 2, 4, 8, 9, 12 and Sept. 3, 5, 6.

PAUL A. HINES visited THE CLIPPER office March 16 on his way to Providence, R. I., where he will play for the sixth successive season. He is in admirable physical condition, having had plenty of out-door practice in Washington, D. C., during the past six weeks. Hines has been for many years afflicted with total deafness, and it will be good news to his professional associates, with whom he is deservedly popular, to hear that he has been at last enabled to overcome this painful infirmity in a measure by the use of an "acoustic cane," manufactured by a well-known optician in this city. Hines, who by the use of the cane can now hear one speaking in a natural tone, expresses himself as being "one of the happiest" of mortals, and says that he will surpass all previous records this season, even brilliant as his have been, both as a batsman and outfielder.

THE DEATH-ROLL.—Two old-time members of the fraternity have recently passed over to the silent majority. William P. Bensel, who died March 8, was identified with baseball more in an official than in an active capacity, having filled the presidency of the Knickerbocker Club of this city in 1862, '63 and '64; Edward Vincelette, who died suddenly March 14, was once well known as an amateur, and formed one of the nine of the Jefferson Club of this city in 1861.

CLAPP AND O'NEIL have been busy practicing together in pitching and catching every morning for the past week at Regan's Court. On Saturday, March 17, after two hours' work with the baseball, they played a game of rackets, with the appended result:

O'Niel	1	1	6	1	0	5	1—15
Clapp	0	0	1	2	3	5	0—11

Referee, H. Chadwick.

THE TOLEDO CLUB will this season be under the management of W. H. Voltz, who has arranged the following dates: April 11, 12, Cleveland Club, in Cleveland; 13, 14, Cleveland, in Toledo; 16, 17, Port Huron, in Toledo; 18, Findlay, in Toledo; 19, 20, 21, Allegheny, in Pittsburg; 23, 24, Columbus, in Columbus; 25, 26, St. Louis, in St. Louis. The only open dates for April are 28 and 30. The Toledo management make no guarantee to League clubs at all during the championship season, and would prefer playing the American Association clubs. The Toledo team report for duty March 20.

JOHN REILLY recently claimed that he missed taking part in only two games while playing with the Metropolitan Club last season. The record, however, shows that he is mistaken, as his name does not appear in the score-sheet of the 2-7 game with the Providence Club Aug. 8; the 23-0 game with the Alaskas Sept. 7; and the 5-3 game with a picked eighteen Sept. 16.

JOHN J. DAILEY, who was at one time well known as a short-stop, having filled that position with the professional clubs of Manchester, N. H., Utica, and Binghamton, N. Y., intends re-entering the professional ranks this season, and would be an acquisition to some of the newly-organized teams.

THE BROOKLYN CLUB'S ground is rapidly being prepared for use, the filling in for the fence having been pushed forward last week by the contractors.

CRICKET.

GEO. GILES, the veteran professional of the St. George Club, has resigned his position after a service of eight years. He left because he could not undertake to bowl for the club any longer and also attend to the increased work required since lawn-tennis became a feature of the club's field-sports. He was willing to remain as groundkeeper and coach, but not at the reduced salary offered on account of his not acting as bowler. The Young America Club have concluded to take a professional to coach the juniors, but not to play in the club eleven. Giles would prove a valuable coach and groundkeeper for them.

THE BROOKLYN CRICKET CLUB met for reorganization for the season of 1883 on Friday evening, March 9, and elected the following officers: President, Alexander Lewis; vice-president, J. Dykeman; recording secretary, C. W. Nelson; financial secretary, Geo. Williams; treasurer, Thomas Ayres; captain, Herbert Maxfield; substitute captain, David Swanson. The special features of this club are the playing of half-day matches on Saturdays and the playing of their own members in all matches, as against the system of revolving. They have a membership of between thirty and forty, and would be happy to receive more. As the dues have been placed at the low sum of four dollars for the season, all lovers of the game can easily join.

C. W. BRADSHAW, who on March 13 was re-elected Mayor of Camden, N. J., was formerly well known as a cricketer. His father was one of the first manufacturers of cricket material in this country, and was afterwards professional for a club in Cincinnati, O., being the predecessor in that position of Harry Wright, now manager of the Providence Baseball Club. His mother for many years used to furnish the dinners which form so indispensable a feature of all well-regulated cricket matches in Philadelphia and vicinity, as well as elsewhere on this mundane sphere.

A BOOK of "old scores" is being compiled by certain well-known and enthusiastic cricketers of Philadelphia, and it promises to be a most interesting and exhaustive monograph of the game in that city and vicinity. A similar history of cricket in this city was once broached, but the project fell through. In England, the work entitled "Cricket Scores and Biographies" has brought the history of English cricket up to 1876, and it now consists of thirteen bulky volumes of upwards of 8,000 pages.

THE MANHATTAN CLUB SECRETARY, L. A. Macintosh, states that the annual Spring meeting will be held at the Pineapple Shades, Pierrepont street, Brooklyn, on March 22, at 8 P. M. The committee desire to express the wish that every member who can make it convenient to attend will do so, as business of importance will be brought forward.

THE ANNUAL MEETING of the Cricketers' Association will be held April 6 in this city. The previous sessions have been held n Philadelphia.

FIRE AND LOSS OF LIFE.

NEW ORLEANS, La., March 20.

Sunday night, at 9.30, when about two thousand people were in Faranta's pavilion, the flaring of the gasoline lamp caused the main canvas to take fire. One of the audience shouted "Fire!" and the rest of the people present became panic-stricken, and all attempted to escape by the main entrance, the stronger crushing the weaker under foot. One woman died in an hour afterwards, and another woman is not expected to live. About eight others were injured, but not dangerously. George Clark, boss-canvasman, formerly of Batcheller & Doris' Circus, had his forearm burnt. Signor Faranta caused the performance to continue and the band to play, in the hope of pacifying the audience. This had some effect; but as the policemen blew their whistles the excitement increased. Faranta was arrested and placed under bonds of $250 for his appearance at trial; but Judge Ford said that the only offense that Faranta had committed was failing to keep a passageway free in his show. Three feet is the diameter of the hole burnt in the main canvas. The fire was put out in a jiffy with less than a bucket of water, and by the property-boy going on the top of the canvas and beating the flames with his hat. Signor Faranta states that he will reopen March 21, using electric lights only. .....Herrmann is doing a profitable business at the Academy of Music.

CUSHMAN AND LEON were busy last week getting their new minstrel company organized, as will be seen by the following notes taken from Washington papers:

The Cushman & Leon's Minstrels (late Kelly & Leon's) are announced here for an early appearance, no date being given. They are now organizing, and intend to present a burlesque opera company of unsurpassed excellence, and will present a musical satire entitled "Langtry, or Ben Butler and the Jersey Lily." In an interview with Mr. Cushman he states: "We are organizing a party that will be A No. 1, and will be comprised of the principal artists in the profession, and the public can be assured that the organization will perfect, in conjuction with Mr. Leon, will be, if money will talk, one of the finest on the road. My entire mind is centred upon this object, and if talent and brains will succeed you will very shortly hear of a big boom in minstrelsy. There has been a bombshell thrown into the Haverly camp, which you can see from the following telegams which I have received: 'Chicago, Ill. Arrived Friday morning B. and O. W. H. Strickland.' 'Working for Haverly—give him no pointers. Signed, W. P. Webster.' Another from Ithaca, N. Y.: 'We are over three weeks behind in salaries. Kit Clarke started for Chicago to-day, to try and raise money enough to pay salaries. Signed, Lew Spencer.' Another reads as follows: 'Give us time you wanted; waited until the moment; will do the best I can. Spencer.' A telegram from Walter Hyde, second violinist, reads: 'If I can get money due, will join you immediately.' Another reads: 'Kit Clarke won't let me off before the 17th, so I cannot attend rehearsal before the 19th. Answer, if all right. Will try to attend rehearsal before, if possible. Signed, W. Hyde.' Another from Stage-manager Morse of Haverly's Minstrels to Frank Cushman, in Baltimore; 'Will you engage me, telegraphing route and asking for an answer to same.'" Concluding, Mr. Cushman says: "Does this look as if Haverly was paying salaries?"—Washington Post.

CUSHMAN AND LEON'S MINSTRELS.—Every arrangement has been completed for the opening here at Lincoln Hall the latter portion of next week of the grand new minstrel troupe under charge and action of those princes of minstrelsy Messrs. Cushman and Leon. This combination has enlisted in its ranks the finest talent in the country, and is destined to make an individual and collective success. Among its novel specialties is Leon's newest sketch, "Langtry, or Ben Butler and the Jersey Lily;" Harrigan and Hart's "Salvation Army;" "The House of Lords;" and the famous Boston "Colored Light Infantry."

THE STATEMENT that several members of Haverly's New Minstrels had left that company for any reason whatever is denied by Kit Clarke, the manager. He says: "The only member who proved recreant was an endman named Spencer, who was enticed away by an offer of double his salary, while the same parties who secured Spencer engaged a violinist named Hyde. Beyond this, no person has left the company. Chas. W. Young, a well-known performer, has replaced Spencer." Business is reported excellent, and their route is Dunkirk, N. Y., March 19, Ashtabula, O., 20, Elyria 21, Fremont 22, Norwalk 23, Adrian, Mich., 24, Ypsilanti 26, Battle Creek 27, Jackson 28.

THE LATE WM. T. AYMAR.

How anxious doth old Father Time
The grains of sand in his hour-glass count!
"Another body," quoth he—"this is no dream,"
As the soul takes wings to upward mount.

"This is no millionaire, ye ken;
No lord nor shepherd of our church—
Only a man, too poor! What then?
Our creed forbids to touch the wretch!

Thank Thee there are some hearts that beat,
Responsive to Thy will, O Lord!
To soothe the fallen, comfort the weak,
And cleanse the mind of foul discord.

Many gay times we've had together—
Our reminiscences blended well.
God has called your home, and now
In meek submission we say "Farewell!"

DEATHS IN THE PROFESSION.

WILLIAM CRESWICK, music-hall performer, died in Bilston, Eng., Feb. 25, aged 54 years. His real name was Beswick, and he was the father of the duettists Nelly Vezin and Julia Creswick.

ALEXANDER LOUIS MANGIN died recently in Paris, France. He was 75 years of age, was the original impersonator of Don Salluste in "Ruy Blas," and had been long in retirement.

MRS. GLOVER died lately in Calcutta, India. She was better known by her professional name, Jessie Raymond, and was well known in New Zealand. Her husband was a son of Mrs. Glover of Glasgow, Scotland. Since his death she had resided chiefly in Auckland, N. Z., and played occasionally with companies visiting that city.

ANOTHER AGED ACTRESS GONE.—An actress who once flourished upon the English stage has just passed quietly away in the person of Miss Clara Emscoe at the ripe age of 91 years. Her funeral took place from her late residence, Washington avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., March 17, her remains being interred in Greenwood Cemetery. A brief sketch of the deceased's stage-career may be of considerable interest to those yet living who donned the sock and buskin in the "good old days." She left behind her but few mementoes of her stage life wherewith to enlighten those who knew her best, except a few playbills, which are in a remarkable state of preservation, considering their antiquity, for we find one dated Jan. 20, 1817. She may have appeared before this date, as many of the playbills in which her name appeared having been accidentally destroyed it is not known when she first made her debut. In the bill of the above date we find her playing a minor character in the pantomime of "Jack Spratt," at the Regency Theatre, Tottenham Court road, London. On March 20 of the same year she, assisted by the Misses Montgomery and Goodchild, danced a pas de trois in the ballet of "Watkin and Winney." At the Pantheon, Edinburgh, Scotland, Oct. 24, 1818, she appeared in the burletta-spectacle of "Wallace, the Hero of Scotland." Following her name on this bill we read "From the Royal Coburg Theatre," which would give some indication that she was considered of no mean repute even at that early date. The same evening she appeared in the pantomime "Harlequin in Egypt." The bill for the same house for March 3, 1819, announced that she was to play for her own benefit Janetta in "Jacodine" (for the first time), and to sing the then favorite song of "The Dashing White Sergeant." She also took part in the melodrama of "The Corsair." At the Pantheon, she was billed for the performance of March 10, 1819, to sing in a duet in the melodrama of "The Black Dwarf," and to appear in the pantomime of "The Silver Axe." She appeared later as Columbine in "The Magic Oak," and at the Theatre Royal, Norwich, March 14, 1820, as Nancy in the pantomime of "Henry and Nancy." Among other pieces and characters in which she figured during that year were "Rochester" and "Don Juan" (taking the part of Donna Anna in the latter), Columbine in "The Necromancer," Florimonda in "Valentine and Orson," "The Recruiting Sergeant," "Boar's Hut" and "The Dumb Girl of the Inn." In 1821 she appeared in "The Student," "Harlequin," taking a joint benefit with a Miss Smith of the company Feb. 15, when "Florence Macarthy" was produced, "El Hyder" being the afterpiece, in which she also assisted. On June 12, 1821, we find her taking part in "Gil Blas" at Astley's Royal Amphitheatre, London, also in "The Golden Farmer;" and July following in "Donna Aurora" and in "The Siege of Londonderry." The following September her name also appears in the casts of the following pieces: "The Old Oak Chest," "Patrick O'Neil," "The Diamond Arrow, "Winning a Husband," "Guy Fawkes" (for Mr. Kinloch's benefit), "King Henry VIII" and "The Cobbler" (a musical burletta), "The Sisters," "Mazeppa," "Pirates of the Isle," "Black and White Bears," "Saint Swithin's Chair" (for her own benefit, Feb. 26, 1823), "The Hypocrite," "Cataract of the Ganges," "Guy Mannering," taking the part of the Gipsy Girl, "Therese," and in "The Battle of Hexham," for Mr. J. Crisp's benefit. From this date (1824) to Nov. 30, 1830—through the destruction of the playbills—we lose all trace of her, but in the latter year we find her taking part in "The Honeymoon" at the New Theatre, Deptford (a few miles from London) for a Mrs. Carter's benefit, playing in "Trick for Trick" for the afterpiece. Five years later (1835) we find her billed in "Mazeppa" at Astley's Royal Amphitheatre, then under the management of Ducrow & West, and in "The Battle of Waterloo," same year and at the place. Jan. 18, 1836, she impersonated Jack in "Harlequin Jack and His Eleven Brothers" at the Victoria Theatre, London. She spoke with pride and joy at mention of her early associations with Frances Maria Kelly, whose obituary appeared in THE CLIPPER a few issues ago, and who died at the advanced age of 92 in London, Eng.

WM. T. AYMAR, a well-known circus performer, died, after a long illness in New York City, March 16, aged 51 years and 9 months. His funeral was to have taken place 19 from the residence of his brother, Walter B. Aymar, in Fordham, at 3 o'clock P. M. At that time relatives, friends and a number of professionals assembled, and religious services were held. Then came a telegram from the officers of the Lily Lodge, No. 342, F. and A. M., of Morrisania, stating that they would take charge of the remains, and consequently further obsequies were postponed until to-day (20). Deceased was born in Brooklyn, L. I., and reared in this city. He entered the circus profession in the latter part of 1841, after having received instruction from his elder brother John, who was killed in St. Hilliers, Isle of Jersey, Eng., Aug. 17, 1843, while attempting to turn a triple somersault with Batty's Circus. It is claimed that with his brother Walter B. in 1859 he took the first circus overland to San Francisco, Cal., that ever made that journey. After performing there some time the brothers visited Peru and other portions of South America. After a lapse of six months William left the show and returned to 'Frisco, where he opened an extensive livery stable. Subsequently he drifted back to the arena, and was for a number of years with Howes' Circus, later with Forepaugh and the European Circus. He then visited Mexico with his brother's circus, and more recently had been engaged with P. T. Barnum. At intervals he had traveled with pantomime troupes, playing the clown. In the circus business he was an excellent general performer, being a good leaper and an excellent rider. He turned somersaults over horses and elephants, did the Pete Jenkins act, and was among the first to do the "Perch." A few years ago, while performing with a circus at Coney Island, he strained himself so severely while riding a buffalo as to induce hemorrhages of the lungs, which eventually caused him to leave the ring. He left a wife (a professional) and two sons, the elder of whom has already made his mark in the arena.

ILLION DAVEAU died of pneumonia at his residence, 116 South First street, Brooklyn, E. D., March 14, aged 38 years. His funeral took place 16, his remains being interred in Cypress Hills Cemetery. He left a wife and several children. His real name was William V. Baltz, and he was born in New York City. About ten years ago he entered the dramatic profession, was for some six years under the management of Augustin Daly, and had since been engaged with several traveling combinations. While at Daly's Fifth-avenue Theatre he made rapid progress in his art, and gave promise of becoming an excellent actor. He was also a writer for story papers, the author of several sketches which had achieved success on the variety stage, and of a few musical compositions. He had also contributed to the columns of THE CLIPPER.

BASEBALL.

THE NORTHWESTERN LEAGUE

held an adjourned meeting March 14 in Toledo, O., the following eight clubs being represented: Bay City, Fort Wayne, Grand Rapids, Peoria, Quincy, Saginaw, Springfield and Toledo. The annual dues of each club were increased from $50 to $100. The playing-rules of the National League were adopted, with the exception of that relating to umpires, in which case the old plan of a staff of twenty-four was retained. An incident of the proceedings was a motion made by a representative of the Peoria Club that no club be allowed to employ a colored player. This was evidently designed to shut out Walker, the colored catcher of the Toledo Club. After an exciting discussion, however, the mover of the motion withdrew it. A schedule of championship games was adopted, each club playing twelve games with the others, making eighty-four in all. The season opens May 1 in Bay City, Fort Wayne, Quincy and Grand Rapids. On the Fourth of July the Bay City Club plays in Saginaw, the Grand Rapids nine in Toledo, the Fort Waynes in Peoria, and the Springfields in Quincy. Secretary Morton announced that George W. Burnham of Detroit had been selected as one of the umpires. The next annual meeting will be held in January, 1884, in Grand Rapids.

A COMMERCIAL ASSOCIATION.

Peck & Snyder have offered to present to a commercial baseball association of this city a championship pennant costing fifty dollars, to be given to the commercial nine of such association which wins the championship for 1883; also a handsomely mounted bat to the player of any such association nine making the most single-base hits, and a silver ball to the player making the best fielding exhibition of the season. The above firm offer facilities at their establishment for a meeting of representatives of commercial nines to organize an association on the basis of that of Boston, said meeting to be held on March 23. The Boston Association's rules include the following: "Any club that plays an ineligible player, or one who has not been a member of the house he represents for one month at least previous to the opening of the playing season, will be promptly expelled upon proof of the fact. The board of directors, composed of one from each club, will be the sole tribunal to decide questions of ineligibility. Umpires will be appointed by agreement of the two clubs, scheduled for a game. If they fail to agree upon a suitable choice, the secretary of the association will designate the umpire."

SECRETARY WILLIAMS of the American Association sends us an official notification to the effect that the Star Club of Covington, Ky., has disbanded and the following players are released from their contracts with the same: A. S. Booth, A. Powell, J. Goodman, A. Cummings, A. Hall, C. Reising and W. C. Blogg; that J. Denny, C. E. Radbourn and J. E. Whitney (expelled) and E. N. Williamson, C. W. Bennett and J. F. Galvin (blacklisted), have been reinstated by the American Association; and that J. Berg, J. W. Keenan, Geo. Bechtel, J. A. Devlin, G. W. Hall, A. H. Nichols, W. H. Craver, R. Higham and H. Doscher are ineligible to play in or against any Association or Alliance Club, and that the Trenton Club of Trenton, N. J., and the Muldoon-Centre Club have been admitted to the American Alliance.

THE WESTCHESTER COUNTY ALLIANCE held a meeting March 17 in Mount Vernon, N. Y. Resolutions were adopted that each club of the Alliance should play four games with each other during the season; that the prize to the club winning the greatest number of games should be a set of colors; also that only one club from each village in the county should be admitted into the Alliance. Delegates from Yonkers, Hartsdale, New Rochelle, Port Chester and Mount Vernon were present. The following were chosen umpires for the clubs named: Mount Vernon—Frank Birmingham and William Watts; Yonkers—George Holland and J. Horton; Hartsdale—L. S. Gilbert and J. Rehill; New Rochelle—W. P. Devoe and C. Davis. The other clubs were not prepared to name their umpires at this meeting.

THE GRAMMAR SCHOOL LEAGUE of this city, including nines from the following schools: Nos. 3, 20, 23, 25, 35, 57, 61 and 68, held an adjourned meeting March 16, when a schedule of championship contests was adopted. The playing will begin April 7 and terminate June 30, each club to play two games with all the other nines, or fourteen in all. The committee that was appointed to see the Park Commissioners and get their permission to play in Central Park announced that it was not ready to report.

GORE AND KELLY, two of the outfielders of the champion Chicago team, were the recipients of a benefit March 11 in New Orleans, La. Two nines contended, Miller's team winning by 9 to 3. Gore and Kelly played with the losers. Flint and Williamson, who were present but did not take part in the game, recently "assisted" a local club in Jacksonville, Florida, where Jimmy Wood of the old Chicago Club is now residing. Taylor of the Alleghenys played in the team opposing Flint and Williamson.

ALEXANDER MCKINNON has signed a contract to play with the Philadelphia Club for 1883. The Boston management feel very much disappointed at his action, as they had counted on securing his services and made strong efforts to have him reinstated. McKinnon, however, has acted honorably throughout, and the threats of the Bostons to have him placed on the black-list are very foolish under the circumstances. McKinnon will play first-base for the Philadelphias, Fisler having no desire to enter the professional ranks again.

THE WESTERN COLLEGE LEAGUE held its annual meeting March 16 in Chicago, Ill. The University of Michigan, which won the championship of the association last season with an unbroken record of victories, withdrew on account of legislation, which rules out five of her players as professionals. The colleges left were Northwestern University of Evanston, Racine College, Beloit College and the University of Wisconsin. A schedule of championship games was adopted.

TOM GILL has been engaged as short-stop by the Trenton Club. He filled the same position last season for the Nameless Club, which won the amateur championship of Brooklyn, and he was one of the team hailing from San Francisco that made an extended Eastern tour in 1876.

THE NORTHWESTERN LEAGUE-ALLIANCE includes the Port Huron Club and the new Indianapolis team under the management of Dan O'Leary.

MANAGER BANCROFT announces that he has made arrangements for his Cleveland team to report in Baltimore, Md., April 2, for a week's field-practice, and he will then open his season with the Baltimores in that city April 9 and 10. Weather permitting, the Clevelands will play eighteen games in April, closing with the Alleghenys, 27 and 28 in Cleveland. All communications for Manager Bancroft should be addressed to New Bedford, Mass., until March 28.

THE TRENTON CLUB, which was last week admitted to the American Alliance, and will also be one of the Interstate clubs, has signed the following players: Quinton, Burke and Donohue, catchers; Hawkins and Healy, pitchers; McGurk, Cronin and Dwyer on the bases; Gill, short-stop; and Goodman, Smith and one of the catchers in the outfield.

THE HARRISBURG CLUB will be represented this season by the following players: Schappert, Wise and Burns, pitchers; Miller, McCloskey and Casey, catchers; Smith, Shetaline and James Say on the bases; Myers, short-stop and manager; with Cline and one of the pitchers and one of the catchers in the outfield.

ED. FUSSELBACH and Denny Mack deny that they have signed with the Albany Club, as claimed by Manager Arnold, and add that they have not yet made any engagements for next season. Fusselbach is at present at his home in Philadelphia, while Mack, who has recently returned from New Orleans, is residing in Hokendaqua, Lehigh County, Pa.

THE RIVERTON CLUB possesses an excellent ground at Riverton, N. J., and includes in its ranks many of the prominent amateurs of Philadelphia. The directors are now ready to receive communications in relation to games for the coming season. Address C. L. Flanagan, 410 South Delaware avenue, Philadelphia, Pa.

GEORGE W. WINKLEMAN, a promising young amateur of Cincinnati, O., while pitching in a practice-game in that city March 18, broke his arm above the elbow in a singular manner. The arm was thrown back, and, as the ball was seen to speed from his hand, the arm dropped to his side broken. He is not likely to play again this season.

PHIL BAKER will play with the Nationals of Washington this season, he having obtained his release from Barnie's Baltimore team. Baker, while practicing recently, was injured in the face by being struck by a foul ball, which broke his mask.

THE MANAGERS of colored clubs in Philadelphia and this city are requested to send their addresses to J. T. Emory, 99 Gilman street, Williamsport, Pa., who is forming a nine for the coming season.

THE OPENING GAME of the season in this city will be played between the Manhattan and Hudson Clubs, on the former's grounds, at the foot of West Thirty-fourth street, Saturday, March 24.

THE CINCINNATIS will this year advertise by a wood-cut of their champion team, life-size portraits, in a group. The poster printed from it will be seven feet high and ten in length.

AN EXCITING CONTEST took place March 9 in Frederica, Del., between the Frederica and Milford Clubs. The home-team won by a score of 13 to 12. The weather was remarkably pleasant.

THE PHILADELPHIAS will visit Washington in April, and play the Nationals of that city.

JAMES W. KEENAN is suspended, but will be reinstated by the Allegheny Club on request.

FRANK LANE, an actor, now with John McCullough's Company, is one of the recently elected League umpires.

THERE IS a letter for John Doyle of the Brooklyn Club in our care.

REGAN'S HANDBALL COURT, in this city, was crowded with ball-players on Tuesday, March 20, when some excellent practice was had, not only in pitching and catching, but also in handball and racket playing. Among those present were Lynch and Nelson of the Metropolitans, Clapp, O'Neil and Connor of the New York Club, Clinton and Diven of the Baltimores, McCormick of the Clevelands, and Tom Mansell of the Detroits. Clapp and Mansell defeated Lynch and O'Neil at handball by scores of 21 to 17 and 21 to 19, the latter pair winning the first game by 21 to 13. Nelson defeated McCormick three straight games at rackets, the respective scores being 15 to 6, 15 to 13, and 15 to 10.

OPENING PLAY IN BROOKLYN.—Should the weather be fine on Saturday next, March 24, there will be a practice game at Prospect Park, Brooklyn, for a prize ball among the professional players now in the metropolis. Should the weather prove unfavorable, it will be played the first fine afternoon of the following week. Sides will be chosen at 3 P. M.

THE TURF.

RACING AT NEW ORLEANS.

The race-meeting at the track of the New Louisiana Jockey Club was continued March 13, under the usual conditions—good weather and track, but a poor attendance. The first race, a handicap, 1,200 yards, was won easily by Hickory Jim; Eva K. second, Turin third, and Quantrell fourth. Time, 1:10. Eva K. was the favorite. In the second, a selling-race, three-quarters of a mile, Laraminta was an easy winner; Billy G. second, Referee third, beating Olivette, Willie Hughes and Moses. Time, 1:16½. Laraminta was the favorite. The third race was a handicap, one and one-sixteenth miles, and was won by Lizzie McWhirter by three lengths; Manitou second, Annie G third. Time, 1:52. Lizzie McWhirter was the favorite.....March 15: The first race, a dash of three-quarters of a mile, was won by the favorite, Malvolio, who beat Jim Turner, Captain Curry and Quantrell in the order named. Time, 1:18. The second race, a mile and a furlong, was also won by the favorite, Athlone, with Manitou second and Referee third. Time, 1:58. The third, a dash of a mile, for beaten horses, was won by Joe Cooper, with Moses second, Florence I third, followed by St. Asaph, Jack of Spades, Willie Hughes and Quantrell. Time, 1:47¼. Moses was the favorite.....March 17, the closing day of the Winter meeting; attendance better than usual; track heavy. The first race, a dash of half a mile, for two-year-olds, was won by the favorite, Davis' gray filly Unknown; Brevet second, Cameo third, and Eros last. Time, 53¼ seconds. The second race, a dash of a mile, was also won by the favorite, Pettingill's Constantina, in 1:47¾; Turin second and Jane Foster third, beating Annie G., Peytona Barry and Moses. While at the post the rider of Billy G. was kicked and badly injured by Annie G., and as another rider could not be immediately got Billy G. was withdrawn. The third race was a steeplechase, over about a mile and a half of the course. It was won by Referee; Captain Curry second and Florence D. third. Time, 2:18. The favorite, Pat Crogan, fell at the fourth jump.

MORRIS & PATTON on March 12 gave G. S. Caldwell $1,500 and Creosote for Ballast, by Bonnie Scotland. Creosote is very sick and cannot fill any of his Spring engagements, but may come around in time for the Summer meetings.

G. J. BRECKENRIDGE'S trotter Charley B., record 2:23, dropped dead at Flatbush, L. I., a few days ago. He was valued at $3,500.

A QUARTER-MILE RACE between Sly and Daniel Payn's mare for $500 a side took place Feb. 24 at Phœnix, Oregon, and was won by the latter.

NEUFCHATEL, by Strachino out of Eclipse, died March 10 at Jerome Park.

JACK DELANEY, a jockey who formerly rode for the Applegate Brothers, died recently in New Orleans, La.

DAN SWIGERT, who bought M. H. Sanford's North Elkhorn stud-farm, since named Elmendorf, is now a member of church, and, it is said, has declined to enter anything in the Stallion Stakes, to be run over the association course at Lexington, Ky., because he believes it encourages horse-racing. At the same time he advertises the sale of forty-six yearlings, the get of his stallions Glenelg, Virgil, Monarchist, Lever, etc., which will likely be bought by turfmen.

JOCKEY RULED OFF.—Hovey, a well-known jockey, who rides for Morris & Patten, was ruled off the track of the Louisiana Jockey Club March 19 by President Simmonds for offering for a consideration to dose the horse Pat Crogan, the favorite in the steeplechase of Saturday, who fell at the eighth hurdle. There is no proof that the horse was drugged, but President Simmonds holds that his jockey should be above suspicion.

THE HORSES at Lexington, Ky., had their first gallop on the track on March 13, and since then have been able to take plenty of outdoor exercise. They have wintered better than usual, not a disease of any kind making its appearance among them.

JOHN CLAY, trainer for Major Thomas, thinks a deal of Queen Ban as a possible winner of the Kentucky Derby. She has spread a great deal, is fully sixteen hands high, and is valued by her owner at $14,000—a price which deterred Ed. Corrigan from buying her.

THE Spring meeting of the Louisiana Jockey Club will commence March 31. Much interest is manifested in the fixed events, especially the Cotton Exchange Stakes, which will probably have a dozen starters.

HENRY BATCHELOR, a promising English jockey on the French turf, was killed March 3 while riding at exercise at Chantilly, France.

ROBERT F. JOHNSON'S fine farm in "Old Kaintuck" was sold last week, and it may cause his retirement, although he still has a fine string of racers and five hundred acres of blue-grass land.

DIXIE, Major B. G. Thomas' celebrated broodmare, a few days ago dropped a dead foal to Himyar and died the following day. She was the dam of the great Hermo, and her loss is keenly felt at Dixiana.

J. CARTER & Co. bought Annie G., by Longellow, from Green Morris, for the remarkably small amount of $300, and soon afterwards declined an offer of $500 for the mare.

BALLAST, now the property of Green Morris, is a strong favorite for the Cotton Exchange Handicap, to be run at the New Orleans meeting.

LUCY JOHNSON was on March 12 attached by a deputy-sheriff at New Orleans, La., Jack Hardy, one of her owners, having applied to the Civil Court to have the mare sold at auction.

BILLY DONOHUE will pilot Leonatus in the race for the Kentucky Derby, for which the latter and Ascender are each now quoted at four to one.

OLD CHECKMATE is favorite for the Louisville Cup, the odds being six to one against.

HUGUS the midget will probably be Commodore Kittson's feather-weight "jock" this year.

W. C. FRANCH has purchased the trotter London, record 2:20¼, for $7,500.

THE Fashion Stables at Chico, Cal., were burned recently, Tim Barnard losing a Buccaneer colt worth $1,000.

THE RING.

HONORS TO SULLIVAN.

By odds the largest assemblage of people ever gathered together to witness a sparring exhibition in Boston, Mass., jammed the immense hall of the Mechanics' Association Exhibition Building on Monday evening, March 19, when John L. Sullivan, looked upon as the champion of all champions, took his first benefit in his native city. The holding capacity of the building in question is stated to be considerably over fifteen thousand, and the reports received state that not only was it crowded to overflowing, but thousands more who were desirous of getting inside were compelled to turn away from the doors. The wealthy members of the Cribb Club, through whose efforts permission to hold the entertainment was obtained, and who labored earnestly to secure a great success, attended the exhibition in a body, as did the members of the Commercial Athletic Club, Highland Athletic Club and other sporting organizations of the Hub, and taken altogether it was one of the grandest ovations ever tendered to a member of the fistic fraternity, and one of which the beneficiary should feel very proud. From a telegraphic account of the exhibition we make some extracts, the interval before going to press being too brief to admit of our receiving a report by mail:

It was a demonstrative but entirely orderly crowd, and the words of caution with which the champion welcomed them were hardly necessary. He said that he proposed to give a series of scientific set-tos, and he hoped that no one in the audience would encourage any of the boxers to knock each other's heads off. He had promised the authorities that everything should be done decently and in order, and he did not intend that anyone should be able to say that there had been any brutality at his benefit.

George Godfrey (colored) of Chelsea and Dan Foley of East Boston first came into the ring. They sparred lightly in the first round, doing little effective work. In the second and third bouts the men warmed up and got in some heavy blows, Godfrey showing the most pluck and being the better man.

Bob Farrell of New York and Patsey Sheppard of Boston were next. There was lively short-arm fighting in all three rounds. Sheppard got a neck-hold on his antagonist in the first bout, and punished him quite severely. It was anybody's fight until the third round, when Patsey got another chance and put in some tremendous blows on four or five points, whereat there were some virtuous hisses from the seats on the platform occupied by members of the City Council.

Billy Edwards and Arthur Chambers gave a thoroughly scientific set-to, with some pretty good hitting thrown in, their style being, as usual, very workmanlike and quite "the thing"—in fact, as perfect a mimic representation of a real ring-fight as could be witnessed.

Sullivan first put on the gloves with Steve Taylor. Taylor rather led the champion in the first round, getting in four or five smart raps under the left ear in return for several light blows on the body. The second round was more interesting. Sullivan tapped his opponent several times about the head and shoulders, and received one good blow upon the jaw. In retaliation, he reached his opponent's ear with an effectual stroke. In the third round, after a little parrying, the men closed, and when time was called the honors were evenly divided. Sullivan, before retiring, was presented with an elegant badge, the gift of the Commercial Athletic Club.

Jimmy Murray and Young Tom Allen were the first pair to go in for genuine slugging. There was hard-hitting from the start, and in the first round Allen was twice knocked off his feet. Both men went in for all they were worth, and it was necessary to separate them after time had been called. The same thing was repeated in the second round. The men pounded each other at close quarters with effect. The police ordered the fight to stop, and Joe Goss got a side-winder in trying to separate the men. Allen was badly winded, but he got in the most blows. In the third round the slugging was again very heavy. Allen's hits were the cleanest, Murray often swinging and missing. It was a stand-off, though Allen was considerably used up.

Sullivan and Joe Coburn made one of the most enjoyable displays ever witnessed in Boston. In the first round the champion drove his opponent, but Coburn made a creditable defense, and got in one or two light taps on Sullivan's head. Both men were more aggressive in the second and third rounds. Sullivan was clearly the master of Joe in strength. They closed once only, just as time was called.

Mike Gillespie and Fiddler Neary were the second couple to make the hair fly. The men hit hard from the start, and often closed. In the second round Neary slipped in recovering, and went off the stage into the arms of a policeman. There was heavy slugging on both sides at the wind-up, and the police again interfered. The men were separated with some difficulty, the advantage, though slight, being with Gillespie. Each was anxious to "keep it up," and it is probable that a match may be arranged for a future date.

John Kilrane and Pete McCoy did some good work. The first two rounds were closely contested, but in the third some heavy short-arm hitting by Kilrane gave him slightly the advantage. The others who sparred were George Fulljames and Marcellus Baker, Jimmy Bagley and Jimmy McGraw, Charley McCoy and James Carroll, Denny Kelleher and Harry Allen. Billy and Tommy Kivlin also wrestled.

Sullivan and Mike Cleary of Philadelphia appeared for the wind-up, which, while being of course perfectly friendly, was quite exciting. Blows in plenty were exchanged, none of them very weighty, however. Sullivan maintained the manifest superiority he had shown in the two other meets. As they retired the applause rivaled that which filled the air when the champion first appeared. Joe Goss and W. J. Mahoney were Masters of Ceremonies.

SHEPPARD vs. DROHAN.

Recently "fight talk" has been indulged in quite extensively by Patsey Sheppard and Tommy Drohan of Boston, but hostilities appeared to have ceased, and outsiders imagined that oil had been poured on the troubled waters, when on Sunday last the following warlike card was published in a local journal:

EDITOR OF THE HERALD.—I desire to recall to memory a communication of Mr. Patsey Sheppard, published in The Herald a few weeks ago, in which that gentleman made an offer (in reply to a proposition of mine) to pay me $1 a minute for every minute I would stand in front of him in play with the gloves. If that is the only chance he will give me, I wish to say now that I accept his offer, and will be prepared at Mechanics' Hall on Monday evening to make Mr. Sheppard my debtor as per agreement, and to prove that I neither underrate nor overrate him as a sparrer. If Mr. Sheppard says he is not prepared to spar to-morrow night I will agree to a delay, and will spar him at the next Cribb Club meeting, by permission of the gentlemen of that organization. Should Mr. Billy Edwards desire to meet me with gloves I will gladly accommodate that gentleman. What I have stated I am prepared to back with money to any reasonable amount. THOMAS F. DROHAN.

Boston, March 17, 1883.

The proposed contest was not, of course, allowed to take place at Sullivan's benefit, but a match will probably result.

DOUBLE-HEADER.—A double P. R. contest took place near Mount Carmel, Pa., March 17. Daniel Gallagher and Michael Mannion, having quarreled, agreed to settle the trouble by a game of "slug," according to the code pugilistico. John Martin seconded Gallagher and Pat Nolan waited on Mannion. Gallagher proved far and away the better man, knocking his opponent spinning in every round, and in the fifth splitting his nasal organ, which completely "done him up," and he failed to go after more. William Mannion, the defeated man's brother, then challenged Gallagher to try him on, which the latter consented to do then and there. The result was that Mannion No. 2 was sent to join his brother after a few rounds, which sufficed to quite use him up. Gallagher weighs about 160lb.

"PRODDY" BURNS is stated by a Philadelphia contemporary to have polished off "Lefty" Sparks in an offhand scrap, for satisfaction, on a ball-ground facing King street, in that city, on Sunday afternoon, March 18. The mill is said to have been conducted according to the rules made and provided by the B. P. B. A. save in a few minor details, and the lads appear to have fought with vim, the result being a victory for "Proddy," who put his man to sleep with a crack on the jugular in the ninth round.

THE MACK-SLADE COMBINATION appeared in Buffalo, N. Y., March 13, 14, having a big house the first night and only a moderate one the second. On the 15th they drew a small house at Hornellsville, and, says our correspondent, "gave a very tame entertainment." From there the troupe went to Corning 16, Ithaca 17, Auburn 19, Syracuse 20, and are to appear at Utica 22.

HARRY WOODSON, the "Black Diamond," and Paddy Connors of Troy were to fight near Albany, N. Y., on Tuesday night, March 20—the day THE CLIPPER went to press. The Trojan is said to be twenty-two pounds the lighter man. This information was sent to us on a postal-card marked "private," so "don't give it away."

DUNN INDICTED.—At Chicago, Ill., on Saturday March 17, the Grand Jury returned a true bill against Jerry Dunn for the murder of Jimmy Elliott.

WE HAVE a letter for George Fulljames,

THE TRIGGER.

BOGARDUS vs. CARVER.

Another contest in the series of clay-pigeon shooting exhibitions between W. F. Carver and A. H. Bogardus took place at Kansas City, Mo., on March 13, when Carver won, scoring ninety-one to sixty-nine. On the 15th they met again, when the docter scored ninety-two to Bogardus' sixty-three. Both did their finest shooting at this sort of game on the 17th, at Omaha, Neb., Carver again proving best at the business by smashing ninety-four to Bogardus' ninety. Their next meeting was at the Driving-park, Council Bluffs, Ia., 19, when the result was a tie, each contestant being credited with breaking ninety-six birds. As if to account for this unequaled scoring, the telegraph informs us that the weather was bright, clear and cool, and there was not a breath of wind.

SAMUEL HUNT TURRILL, one of Chicago's representative sportsmen, died suddenly of pneumonia in that city March 8 in his fifty-ninth year. On the 9th inst. he acted as referee in the Bogardus-Carver shoot at St. Louis, and on his return home ill was taken ill; but his illness was not considered serious, and he was thought to be recovering on the day he died. He commenced to follow field sports in 1838, and was a participant in almost every shooting tournament held in Chicago since then. He furnished the funds to start the Rod and Gun in 1873, effected the consolidation of that journal with the Forest and Stream in 1877, and sold out his interest in the paper in 1879.

GREEN VS. WILLIAMS.—A match for one hundred dollars a side, one hundred birds each, five traps, 30 yards rise, Hurlingham rules to govern, was shot at Woodbridge, N. ATHLETIC.

BICYCLING IN BOSTON.

One of the most peculiar and at the same time aggravating and interesting races that ever took place in this country was run at the New England Institute Fair building, Boston, Mass., on Saturday evening, March 17, the circumstances of which are detailed below. The track is fast losing its reputation for excellence as a bicycling course. The boards in many places are worn rough, rattle badly and are very loose, and were it not that the 'cyclists in Boston are of considerable excellence the track would endanger the interests of the sport. A new track should at once be laid, and the enterprise of the management in so doing would surely be repaid by increased demand and the desirability of it for use. The increased rent would cheerfully be paid. If this is not done, another and more suitable place will be found. The crowd was of the usual dimensions, filling the seats and the stairways and occupying all the standing-room near the start. Many ladies were present. The races were under the management of Harry D. Hedger. The first was a five-mile race, for amateurs who had never won a prize, for a gold and a silver medal. Out of eleven entries but four, T. Coleman (East Boston), P. Aubin (Newton), James Hughes (South Boston) and A. D. Rice (Roxbury), came to the scratch. Coleman took the lead, followed by Aubin, Hughes and Rice. At the end of the first lap the order was Aubin, Coleman, Hughes and Rice. The men were going at a fair pace, well together. In the fourth lap Hughes took the lead and Aubin went to the foot. Rice challenged Hughes and passed him in the third lap of the second mile, but Hughes got back in the first lap of the next mile. The men were so close together and so well matched that it was difficult to guess the winner, and the brushes were close and exciting. Rice took the lead at the end of the third mile and lost it in the second lap of the fourth, only to regain it in the next lap. Coleman now manifested a desire to join in the fun, and took the lead in the fourth lap. Rice and Hughes unluckily collided on the last lap of the fourth mile, the latter coming down heavily upon his shoulder, but not injuring himself seriously. Rice pluckily remounted, and, in spite of the great gap, speeded after the leaders, gaining at every turn of his wheel. The distance was, however, too great, Coleman winning easily; Aubin second, with Rice close upon him. By some accident an extra lap was run, and Rice passed both men. The times were as follow:

	Coleman.	Aubin.	Rice.	Hughes.
One mile	4m. 01s.	4m. 04s.	4m. 01s.	3m. 59s.
Two miles	3 50	3 50	3 49	3 51
Three miles	3 53	3 50	3 53	3 53
Four miles	4 01	4 02	4 17	——
Five miles	3 55	3 56	3 42½	——
Totals	19 40	19 42	19 42½

The attraction, of course, was Prince's attempt to ride twenty miles against four picked riders, each to go five miles in succession. The first prize was $100 and the second $50, while the picked man who made the best record was to receive an elegant pair of ball pedals. Prince was to receive a gold medal if he lowered the record. The relays were to be made before passing the scratch, the relieving man to come by on a level with his partner. Prince appeared at 8.45 in his cardinal-and-black shirt, over which he wore a sash made of the American colors, which he bore for the first time. Wilson was his first competitor, and Prince contented himself with following him until the pistol signaled the last lap of the first five miles, when he went ahead and opened a wide gap and passed the scratch an eighth of a lap ahead. C. J. Young, who was to relieve Wilson, instead of coming by the scratch with him, took about the lead that Prince had of Wilson, and soon led Prince. Young's proceeding was as stupid as could be imagined, and virtually decided the race as far as he and his partners were concerned, on account of foul. Prince protested at the end of each lap, claiming that Young would have to make a full-lap. Young was vigorously hissed for several laps, but he disregarded all manifestations and bent to his work, going around at a high rate of speed. Prince was very much worked up by this unfair start, and lost much time in his indignant denunciations before the judge's stand. Young meanwhile had gained an entire lap. When the pistol signaled Young's last lap, Prince spurted and Wilson came on behind Young. Prince kept behind the newcomer throughout until the last lap, when Woodside came in fairly. At the beginning of the last mile the starter discharged the pistol as per agreement. Woodside, who had been holding Prince easily, fancied that this was the last lap, and so did many of the spectators. After passing the scratch Woodside dismounted, but Prince saw his mistake, and fairly skimmed over the boards in his effort to secure the advantage beyond doubt. Woodside did not again mount, and when the pistol again cracked, as the signal for the last lap, Prince spurted and came in an easy winner in 1h. 7m. 47⅕s., lowering his own record of 1h. 7m. 53⅕s., made at the same place May 25, 1882. A world of explanation, recrimination and expostulation followed. The referee said that it had been understood by the riders, or their representatives, that a pistol would be fired once at the beginning of the last mile and once at the beginning of the last lap. After a consultation he decided to give the race to Prince. Woodside by stopping lost the ball pedals, and also the honor of defeating the champion. The men rode unusually well and fast, and the result was not completely satisfactory. Under proper conditions four such men should defeat the champion, or at least force him for all he is worth. Young and Woodside especially forced Prince to his best, and seemed to be able to stand any spurt he might make. Prince was remarkably fresh after the race, and very voluble and indignant. The winner's times were as follow:

PRINCE.

First mile	3m.	19s.	Eleventh mile	37m.	29s.
Second mile	6	43⅘	Twelfth mile	41	00
Third mile	10	11	Thirteenth mile	44	31
Fourth mile	13	44	Fourteenth mile	48	02
Fifth mile	17	01	Fifteenth mile	51	23
Sixth mile	20	33	Sixteenth mile	54	54
Seventh mile	24	07	Seventeenth mile	58	32
Eighth mile	27	27	Eighteenth mile	1h. 01	13
Ninth mile	30	52½	Nineteenth mile	1 04	35
Tenth mile	34	06	Twentieth mile	1 07	47⅕

Young received the ball pedals for the best time against Prince. Prince's fastest mile was the 16th, in 3m. 11s., against Woodside, and his slowest, against Young, was 3m. 34s.

The concluding race was a five-mile spin between J. W. Wilson and George Harrison, for $50 and a gold medal. Wilson led easily throughout, and, although Harrison spurted at the finish, won by a fifth of a second. Wilson's time was 17m. 43⅘s. The excellent timing again calls for special notice and the warmest commendation. In the twenty-mile race there was but a difference of one second between the watches. The officials were: Referee, Eugene E. Merrill; judges, C. M. Howard, A. D. Handy and J. W. Wattles; timekeepers—J. G. Lathrop, A. L. Estabrook and W. J. Walsh; starter, W. W. Stall; scorers—Arthur Whitaker, W. P. Haskell and A. H. Forbush; clerks of the course—H. Corey, A. L. Atkins and John F. McClure. The medals, which were very artistic, were designed and made by Eugene E. Merrill.

ENGLISH CROSS-COUNTRY CHAMPIONSHIP.

The annual race for the cross-country championship of England took place at Roehampton on Saturday afternoon, March 3, and was attended by a greater number of spectators than was present on any one of the previous six occasions. Eight clubs were represented by teams, and the Moseley Harriers—composed of W. G. George, W. Snook, J. E. Hickman, E. C. Carter, G. H. Bannister, W. J. Laurence, O. W. Haydon, F. Potham, J. Leslie and G. E. Dutfield—proved the winners by thirty-nine points, their total being 37; Birchfield Harriers, 76; South London Harriers, 90; Clapton Beagles, 153; Edgbaston Harriers, 200; Blackheath Harriers, 225; Ranelagh Harriers, 305; London Midland A. C., 381. G. A. Dunning, Clapton Beagles, was first man in, finishing very gamely. Details:

When the men had fairly settled down, Snook took the lead, followed by Dunning and George. After two miles had been reeled off Dunning lost quite thirty yards by running wide, then George, Dunning, Snook, Laurence and Foreman ran a slashing race for upwards of three miles. At the half distance barely half a dozen yards divided the quintet named. Going up Cottenham slope George tired, and coming on to the common Foreman was well in front, Dunning lying second. About a mile and a half from home Dunning put it on and wrested the lead from Foreman. George then had a go for the last named, cut him down, and assumed second place. Although the champion struggled gamely, all the steel was taken out of him, but he spurted again. He could not, however, sensibly diminish Dunning's lead, who won easily by twenty yards; a similar distance divided the second and third. Order at finish—G. A. Dunning, Clapton Beagles, first (time, 1h. 9m. 25s.); W. G. George, Moseley H., second (time, 1h. 6m. 30s.); J. B. Foreman, South London H., third (time, 1h. 6m. 47s.); W. J. Laurence, Moseley H., fourth (time, 1h. 6m. 58s.); W. Snook, Moseley H., fifth (time, 1h. 7m. 30s.); E. C. Carter, Moseley H., sixth (time 1h. 7m. 38s.); J. E. Hickman, Moseley H., seventh (time, 1h. 8m. 2s.); G. H. Bannister, Moseley H., eighth (time, 1h. 8m. 16s.); O. W. Hayden, Moseley, H., ninth (time, 1h. 8m. 17s.); W. J. Laurence, Moseley H., tenth (time, 1h. 8m. 18s.)

Previous records: Feb. 24, 1877, Thames H. and H., won by twenty-three points; first man, P. H. Stenning; thirty-three ran. Time, 1h. 15m. 40s. March 9, 1878, Spartan H., won by fourteen points; first man, P. H. Stenning; thirty-three ran. Time, 1h. 6m. 40s. March 22, 1879, Thames H. and H., won by ten points; first man, P. H. Stenning; forty-one ran. Time, 1h. 34m. 1s. March 6, 1880, Birchfield H., won by twenty-three points; first man, P. H. Stenning; eighty-eight ran. Time, 1h. 8m. March 5, 1881, Moseley H., won by twenty-six points; first man, G. A. Dunning; 105 ran. Time, 1h. 11m. 58s. March 4, 1882, Moseley H., won by thirty-six points; first man, W. G. George; 107 ran. Time, 1h. 9m. 3s.

HARVARD ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION.

The second Winter meeting of the Harvard Athletic Association took place in the Hemenway Gymnasium on Saturday afternoon, March 17, and was a still greater success than the preceding. It was the first ladies' day, and the fair sex and their escorts did not fail to occupy every advantageous inch of room, the attendance being about 2,000. Many were obliged to stand, although everything possible was done to seat the crowd by erecting inclined rows of seats from the balcony to the floor entirely around the building. Young and old graduates, undergraduates and boys who were soon to enter as undergraduates, with their lady attendants, vied in enthusiasm. The only criticism that could be made was as regards sparring, which, as experience has proved, is clearly out of place at a ladies' meeting, especially when one of the contestants assumes a peculiarly pugilistic attitude and attempts the "knocking-out" business. This may be right enough when ladies are not present, but the expressions of disgust and dislike uttered by many at the spectacle they were obliged to witness should prevent any further experiments of like nature. The records of the meeting were excellent, and well ahead of the attempts of other colleges this Winter. The idea of having colored badges of ribbon to designate contestants was excellent. The representation in the sports thus far has been almost entirely from the seniors and freshmen. The sophomores and juniors have entered in two meetings three and four men, a record which is surely one to be ashamed of, and which shows the proverbial indifference in a high degree. The freshmen have done finely, and show excellent material.

The first event on the programme was the two-hand vault, one of the general-excellence events for which a special prize is awarded. The entries were G. B. Morison, '83 (white); S. Cary, '86 (green); T. C. Bachelder, '83 (blue); M. J. Stone, '85 (pink); W. Soren, '83 (black); S. H. Fessenden, '86 (yellow); A. C. Denniston, '83 (red); C. H. Atkinson, '85 (brown). The bar was started at 5ft. 4in., which was altogether too low, for on reaching the higher distances the best men were too fatigued to accomplish what their capabilities allowed. The men should always be shown in their best strength, if possible. The styles of vaulting were varied, but showed excellent work and training; 6ft. 4½in. was all that Bachelder could do. Denniston was left at 6ft. 6⅛in., and Carey at 6ft. 7¼in. Morison and Fessenden succumbed after accomplishing 6ft. 8¾in., and Stow and Soren followed suit at 6ft. 10¾in. Atkinson, a little but very graceful vaulter, covered 7ft. 1in., breaking the Harvard and college records for the performance.

The second event was the first bout in lightweight sparring, between W. H. Stebbins, '86, and W. H. Page, '83. Page was the smaller, but the stronger, and was compactly built. Stebbins looked rather weak. Stebbins was very nervous, but managed to do good work in the first round. In the second round Page repeatedly went for Stebbins' wind, and succeeded in his purpose, for in the next round Page, who acted on the offensive throughout, gave Stebbins a blow that sent him tottering to a chair, rendering him unable to spar any more. Page was awarded the bout. The second bout was between F. S. Parker, '86, and H. M. Ayars, '86. Parker is splendidly built, and sturdier and stronger than Ayars. He at once dashed for his opponent, but the latter was too clever for him, and in every round returned the favors with a very usurious rate of interest, as the state of Parker's complexion showed. The decisive bout was between Ayars and Page. The gentlemanly style of the former and his plucky stand was in marked contrast to his opponent's bulldog style. Ayars countered beautifully and boxed with far more skill and effect than the latter, and clearly had the advantage when time was called. In the second round Page attacked his opponent's wind, but he was well parried, and received some telling blows on his visage in return. The endurance of Page, however, was too much for the inexperienced freshman, and he got the cup.

The third event was legitimate club-swinging, limited to five minutes for each contest. The entries were H. A. Taylor, '86; E. N. Snyder, '86; and H. A. Hamlin, '84. Hamlin won the cup, performing difficult and unique movements with grace and ease. Taylor excelled in variety and gave a very creditable exhibition. The whole was clearly above anything given for some time at Harvard.

The fourth event was a fencing bout between R. D. Smith, '86, and W. D. Underwood, '84. Underwood is left-handed, and this seemed to be to his advantage. He showed more than the usual skill in contests of this kind, being particularly good at disarming, depriving his opponent of the use of the foil three times. The score was 7 to 3. Underwood then met Foote, '86, who had a bye. Foote was more skillful than Smith, while Underwood seemed careless and too confident, and, although he disarmed Foote three times, he lost the bout and the event; score, 7 to 6.

The next event was the standing high-jump. Entries: D. B. Chamberlain, '86; A. C. Denniston, '83; T. C. Bachelder, '83; W. Soren, '83; F. B. Fay, '83; C. O. Landers, '86; and G. B. Morison, '83. This was another of the general-excellence events, and besides is an event in which Harvard holds the amateur record in the world. It was particularly well contested. Denniston, Bachelder and Landers cleared 4ft. 4¾in.; Morison, 4ft. 5⅛in.; Fay, 4ft. 6 9-10in. Chamberlain, who jumped beautifully, made the excellent record of 4ft. 9¼in., and Soren made the splendid jump of 4ft. 11 3-10in., showing that he has not lost his fine form. While the others strained every nerve to clear the bar, Soren and Chamberlain made easy work of it. The same complaint must be made here as in the two-hand vault.

G. H. Heilbron, '83, was the only entry for featherweight sparring, and he was awarded the cup.

The running long-jump was next, and a start was given from an inclined plane and the jump taken from another onto a mattress. The entries were W. Soren, '83; C. M. Field, '84; L. Lincoln, '86; and C. O. Lander, 86. Soren won, clearing 18ft. 3in.; Field second, 17ft. 10½in.

The last event was the tug-of-war, five minutes' limit, 600lb, between the seniors and juniors. The teams were as follow: Seniors—H. Lilienthal, W. Fuller, T. C. Bachelder, J. H. B. Easton (anchor); Juniors—J. R. Walker, A. B. Crane, L. V. Lemoyne, G. Kemp (anchor). The juniors won the toss and took the north-end. The seniors gained two inches on the drop, which was soon recovered. At the end of one minute the seniors commenced to gain, and held the advantage to the end, when they led by six inches.

The score for the general-excellence prize, three events of which have taken place, is now as follows: Parallel-bars—Bachelder, 8½; Morison, 8; Denniston, 7. Two-hand vault—Bachelder, 5; Morison, 7½; Denniston, 6. Standing high-jump—Bachelder, 6½; Morison, 7; Denniston, 6½. Total—Morison, 22½; Denniston, 19½; Bachelder, 20. For the eight events, '83 had thirteen entries and took five prizes; '84 had four entries and took one prize; '85 had two entries and took one prize; '86 had thirteen entries and took one prize. The entries for both meetings show as follow: Seniors, twenty-six entries and ten prizes; juniors, five entries and two prizes; sophomores, three entries and one prize; freshmen, sixteen entries and two prizes; special students, three entries and two prizes. Total—Fifty-three entries and seventeen prizes. The cup for general excellence in sparring was awarded to Page. Heilbron has held the featherweight championship two years and the lightweight one year, besides winning it at this meeting. Mr. Lowell, the president, announced that there would be an extra meeting on Monday evening, March 26, at eight o'clock, when the programme of Saturday, March 24, would be repeated, and a tug-of-war between the Medical and Law School teams be substituted for that between '83 and '86. The University crew were unable to give an exhibition at the meeting on account of the inability of the stroke (C. P. Curtis) to row. The officials were: Referee, Dr. Dudley A. Sargent; judges—Prof. William E. Byerly and Edward W. Atkinson, '81; referee of sparring and judge of fencing, John Boyle O'Reilly; judge of fencing, S. H. Ordway; judges of sparring—Clifford Brigham, '80, and Dr. John Bryant; judge of club-swinging, C. P. Nichols, '83.

NEW YORK ATHLETIC CLUB.—This club held their annual meeting on Tuesday evening, March 13, at which favorable reports were received from the executive committee, secretary and treasurer. Seventy-eight new members were elected, including oarsmen and athletes from other clubs, while ninety-four candidates were proposed for membership. The election resulted in the choice of the following officers: President, William R. Travers; vice-president, Alfred H. Curtis; secretary-treasurer, William Wood; captain, Otto Sarony; first-lieutenant, William C. Wilmer; second-lieutenant, Harry B. Phinny; executive committee—Hermann Oelrichs, Thomas R. Keator, D. Henry Knowlton, A. V. de Goicouria, Walter S. Wilson, Benjamin C. Williams, James R. Curran, Edward S. Innet and Rutgers B. Van Brunt. The club have under consideration the building of a commodious club-house in the city—something they should have done long ago.

THE EAST BALTIMORE ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION was formed last week by a number of gentlemen in Northeast Baltimore, including Wm. H. Gluck, Joshua Horner, J. H. Preston, Dr. Hartmann and others. The Association purpose buying or leasing from John W. Garrett four acres of land situated at Waverly for a ball and athletic grounds, and at the last meeting a resolution was passed making a proposal to Mr. Garrett to that effect. The Association now consists of 30 members, and has fixed the limit at 36.

DOLE ENGAGED.—At a meeting of the directors of the Pullman (Ill.) Athletic Club March 6, W. C. Dole Jr., was appointed as the club's instructor, and given general supervision of all sports. He seems to have "caught on" already with the members, as a great many have commenced exercising under his direction in the club's tempo rary gymnasium in the Arcade.

JOHN CUDMORE has opened a school of physical culture on Harrison avenue, Leadville, Col., and the prospects of success are good

COLUMBIA COLLEGE BOAT CLUB.

The Winter athletic meeting of this club was held at Madison-square Garden, this city, on the evenings of March 16, 17. The weather was pleasant upon both evenings, but on neither was the attendance large, and the result of the meeting has not been to add much money to the funds of the club. The majority of the events were open to all amateurs, and the entries received were numerous. The sport was excellent, and in one instance—a trial-heat in the 75-yard run, won by J. B. White—a best on record was equaled. The result of the different competitions was as follows:

Seventy-five yards run, final heat—L. P. Smith, 5yds. start, first, in 8s.; G. C. Walton, M. A. C., 5½, second; J. B. White, M. A. C., scratch, third.

FIFTY-MILE WALK.—The first heat of H. Carless' fifty-mile novice walking-race, for cash prizes aggregating seventy-five dollars and a cup for the winner, took place at the Prince of Wales' Grounds, London, Eng., March 3, between three and four hundred spectators attending. Twenty-three started, and the three who walked the full distance did so in the following order and time: J. Wade, Tottenham, 9h. 14m. 30s.; J. Bixley, Wapping, 9h. 29m. 15s.; F. Morgan, Mile-end, 10h. 1m. 30s. The second heat was to have been walked March 12, and the conditions were that the man making the fastest time in the two heats was to receive the main prize, while ten shillings additional was offered to all who covered fifty miles in ten hours.

AT THE OXFORD UNIVERSITY SPORTS at Oxford, Eng., March 3, J. H. Ware, Brasenose, put the shot 38 feet 8 inches, being one of the best performances ever done at the University. The quarter-mile run was taken by F. B. Marriott, making all the running, in 52s.; F. P. Le Marchand threw the hammer 97 feet 4 inches; J. A. Perkin got home in the three-mile run in 15m. 4s.; J. Bruce-Williamson took the 150-yards run in 15⅘s.; F. L. Horner was first in the half-mile in 2m. 5⅗s.; and M. B. Peacock quite easily cleared 20 feet 9 inches in the running long-jump.

ENGLAND VS. SCOTLAND.—The thirteenth international match at Rugby football between teams from England and Scotland was contested March 3 at Raeburn place, Edinburgh, Scotland. The visiting players were successful by two tries to one try. The record now stands as follows: England, five games; Scotland, three; five drawn.

HOMER LANE, the old-time collar-and-elbow wrestler, defeated John Clifford's unknown in a match at Leadville, Col., March 11. A local journal concludes a brief notice of the affair with these suggestive words: "Until honesty is included with wrestling, the exercise will remain a dead letter in Leadville."

THE EASTER HANDICAPS at the rival Sheffield, Eng., tracks respectively received the following number of entries: Newhall Grounds, 200yds., virtual scratch-man Hutchens, fifty-eight; Queen's Grounds, 200yds., Hutchens scratch-man, seventy-two. In the former Hutchens is down to run 125¾yds., and in the latter 127¾yds.

W. COOPER, 110yds. start, was the winner of a one-mile handicap-run, for $80, $15 and $5, at the Abbey Hey Grounds, Gorton, near Manchester, Eng., Feb. 25. N. Cox, 62yds., finished second, by three yards; W. Cummings, scratch, third. Time, 4m. 20⅕s. Cooper is 20 years old, 5ft. 7in. high, and weighed 147lb.

ROBERT VINT, the long-distance pedestrian, has prospered in business in Brooklyn, N. Y., and it is stated that he has invested the profits in real-estate, having purchased the house and farm of Henry R. Prime at Huntington, L. I.

JAMES PAUL, a well-known English pedestrian, recently met with a serious accident, necessitating the amputation of his left hand.

THE TRIGGER.

TRAP-SHOOTING AT WALNUT HILL.—Members of the Massachusetts Rifle Association and other organizations engaged in trap-shooting at the above grounds March 14, with the result here shown: First match, five pigeons—First, E. Ward; second, C. H. De Rochemont, G. R. Durand, T. C. Fielding; third, C. E. Folsom, R. F. Schaefer. Second match, five balls—First, E. W. Law, E. Ward; second, R. F. Schaefer, G. R. Durand, G. C. Strong; third, H. S. Harris, C. H. De Rochemont. Third match, five pigeons—First, Williams, Frye, King; second, Durand, Hart, D. F. Eddy; third, Law, Strong. Fourth match, five pairs balls—First, O. C. Barrett; second, W. Williams and C. J. Noyes; third, Hart and Law. Fifth match, five pigeons—First, Ward and Durand; second, Schaefer and Barrett; third, Williams and French. Sixth match, five balls—First, Schaefer, Hart, Fielding and King; second, Law and Sawyer; third, Blanchard and Barrett.

A RECORD EQUALED.—On Sunday, March 4, Fred Kuhnle, the California rifle-expert, made an attempt to excel his previously unequaled score of 457 points at 200 yards, one hundred shots, at Shell-mound Range, San Francisco. The wind was variable, blowing the greater part of the time diagonally across the line of fire and militating against success, but nevertheless Kuhnle managed to tie his former great score, his shots all counting either bull's-eyes or centres.

BOGARDUS VS. BREWER.—John L. Brewer of Philadelphia has covered the deposit posted by Captain Bogardus when he issued his challenge to shoot any man, bar Carver, a pigeon-match for $500 a side, 100 birds each, five traps, 30yds. rise, 80yds. fall, London Gun Club rules to govern, and give one yard advantage. He proposes to shoot such a match at Philadelphia, and let Bogardus name the date any time two weeks after April 5, gate-receipts to be divided.

NICK WILLIAMS defeated W. L. Taylor in a match at clay-pigeons, fifty each, 20 yards rise, at Adams' Point, San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 26; score, 35 to 33. On the preceding day Williams defeated O. K. Hopkins in a match at live pigeons, fifteen each, thirty-one yards rise, Hurlingham rules, at Bird's Point; score, 13 to 11.

THE CALIFORNIA RIFLE ASSOCIATION will hold their annual Spring tournament at Shell-mound Range during the latter part of April. A team will shortly be organized for a trip to Carson, Nevada, there to contend against the Carson team in a match for the Pacific Slope trophy, held by the latter.

WORCESTER VS. BRATTLEBORO.—Teams of ten men, representing respectively the Worcester, Mass., and Brattleboro (Vt.) Rifle Associations, shot a match at the former place March 15, Brattleboro winning by a score of 977 to 948 out of 1,200 possible, Massachusetts target.

W. F. HOWARD, holder of the individual championship at glassball-shooting in Massachusetts, defeated W. S. Perry of Worcester in a match therefor at Stoughton March 15. Fifty balls were shot at by each, Howard breaking forty-six and his antagonist forty-five.

A PIGEON-MATCH was shot at Oceanport, N. J., March 10, Clark Jeffrey and John Gibb, of Long Branch defeating A. R. Coleman and W. H. Little of Red Bank.

THE RING.

BILLY EDWARDS' BENEFIT.

There was a rare muster of lovers of the science of self-defense in general, and of personal friends and admirers of the very level-headed ex-champion of lightweights in particular, at Madison-square Garden, this city, on Tuesday evening, March 13. The occasion was the benefit annually taken by Billy Edwards, and the assemblage gathered to do him honor and swell his bank-account at the same time numbered not far from four thousand persons, composed in large part of professional gentlemen and business men. As regards the entertainment itself, it has not been surpassed in the matter of quality and quantity combined by any sparring show given in this city for a long, long time; and it may well be understood, therefore, that the spectators received a full return for their money, and departed at the conclusion of the lengthy programme more than satisfied, and mentally resolving not to miss the next big boxing spread which "Billy" prepares for their delectation. The special feature of the exhibition was the appearance of John L. Sullivan (who had come on from Boston expressly to oblige the beneficiary) and Joe Coburn. They had shaken hands and agreed to forget the misunderstanding which had foolishly been allowed to engender ill-feeling between them, and, after the spectators had ceased cheering them, they gave a really fine display of the art of boxing. Sullivan assumed the initiative and maintained it throughout, Coburn keeping on the defensive, and contenting himself with an occasional counter. Heavy exchanges were out of order, but yet the quickness of the hitting, light though it was, and the cleverness shown in stopping and turning aside blows, as well as celerity in using their pins in getting out of danger, greatly pleased the lookers-on. Sullivan, whose immense reserve-power was apparent, as in all his previous "light" set-tos, took occasion to say beforehand that he had been requested to spar at a benefit which H. A. Slade's backer had proposed to get up for Jimmy Elliott's mother, which he could not do because his presence in Boston was necessary at the time fixed therefor. However, he would contribute one hundred dollars to the fund for her relief, and if the party mentioned would arrange a date for said benefit to suit him, and bring Slade to the front then, he (Sullivan) would be happy to spar the Maori—or, to use his own words, "the half-breed stiff." Steve Taylor and Johnny Reilly were among the best of the many other couples who were marshaled by Uncle Bill Tovee and announced by Frank Whittaker. Both these men are masters of the mittens, and they pleased the people with a capital exhibition of ability, hitting and stopping beautifully. Reilly is the lighter man, and consequently better able to waltz than his big antagonist, who, however, never showed to better advantage than on this occasion. Aside from the wind-up, the most noticeable of the other bouts was one between Pete McCoy and Pat McDermott, the latter of whom once fought W. C. McClellan. They flew at each other like savage bulldogs, and exchanged hit for hit in a very business-like way, one of the hot 'uns received dropping Pat in the second round. Thereupon Captain Williams admonished them that they must "go easy," but the warning had little effect, for in the next and last round McCoy knocked his adversary down twice, Pat having grown weak. Rattling good set-tos were also witnessed between those bold British featherweights Frank Wilson ("Mat Collinson's Mouse," who once gave clever "Spring Dick" a warming) and Joe Fowler, "Funny" Cook and young Tom Allen, McDonald and McClellan, Mack and Edler, F. J. Crysler and R. Turnbull, Johnny Cash and Alf. Austin, Black Diamond and Black Sam, Ned Lester and Charley McCoy, and Pat Jordan (otherwise known as "the Professor") and George Taylor. J. M. Laflin also wielded the heavy clubs and advertised his rowing-machine, and P. J. Ring and C. Decker gave a sample of their proficiency in the art of collar-and-elbow wrestling, the former obtaining the only fall secured. During the progress of the entertainment it was announced that Joe Prendergast, W. C. McClellan's stalwart pupil, was ready to box anybody, barring Sullivan and Coburn—an announcement which appeared to amuse those who had remembered reading a paragraph in different papers in which it was alleged that Mac was prepared to match his big 'un against anyone to spar four rounds, for as much as $2,500 a side, and who wondered much to hear that Coburn and Sullivan were barred. Doubtless William knows what he is about, even if his protege is a fine specimen of physical manhood. When Edwards and Chambers made their appearance on the stage they were received with an outburst of cheering which lasted some time, and, after thanks had been offered up on behalf of the beneficiary, they proceeded to give such a set-to as might be looked for from two consummate fistic artists, each of whom had gained high honors both on the turf and on the stage. It was indeed a highly artistic display, and was loudly applauded, the only cause of regret being that it was not prolonged.

A BATTLE WITHOUT GLOVES.

Jack Ewin of Bethnal Green (age, twenty-five; weight, 126lb; height, 5ft. 6in.; winner of 140lb competition at Lambeth Baths, and 132lb at the Royal Victor) and Dave Hayes of Stepney (age, twenty; height, 5ft. 8½in.; weight, 144lb) fought with nature's weapons, for a purse, March 5, near London, Eng. A pleasant spot was selected for the battle, and a party of thirty, all told, headed by a gallant captain (who stood referee), assembled at the rendezvous. The arrangements were carried out by a well-known M. C., and at the hour appointed both lads stood up for

THE FIGHT.

Round 1. Both came up smiling to the scratch. Hayes led off with his left on Ewin's right eye, the latter replying with a dab on the body. Ding-dong exchanges all over the ring followed, and Hayes threw Ewin, which closed the round. Time, 3m.

2. Both replied smartly to time. Ewin sent his left straight home in the pit of the stomach, and then brought his right home on the jaw. Nothing daunted, Hayes came with a rush, drove Ewin onto the ropes, where they went at it hammer-and-tongs, finally closing for the fall. This was a terrific hard-hitting round, first one and then the other holding the advantage. At last Hayes got Ewin fairly locked and threw him with a fair cross-buttock onto his head, and fell uppermost. Time, 11m.

3. Rather slow to time. Ewin, very cautious, led off on Hayes' left eye, which nearly closed, and a rally followed. Ewin landed on the mouth, Hayes fighting for the body, and Ewin then sent his left flush on the nose, drawing the claret freely. The round was finished by both falling side by side. Time, 6m.

4. Hayes' left eye was fast closing, his mouth out of shape, and his nasal organ rather swollen, while Ewin did not seem to be much punished. Ewin went for his man, and, as it was seen that Hayes was fighting open-handed, his second called upon him to close his hand, but he did not seem to relish the job. Ewin now landed when and where he liked, and Hayes, who was falling very weak, finally closed the round by falling.

5 and last. On coming up for this round it was apparent that Hayes did not stand a ghost of a chance, so his second stepped into the ring and gave in for him. Hayes was greatly punished, but Ewin had only a slight mouse under the right optic, though his body was flushed, but in other respects he was none the worse for the encounter. Ewin made a collection for the loser. The winner was seconded by a well-known lightweight (winner of Jack Massey's Cup), and the loser by a well-known lightweight instructor. All returned home delighted with their day's outing. The fight altogether lasted 23m.

MRS. ELLIOTT'S BENEFIT.

The attendance at the exhibition given in the upper hall of Madison-square Garden on Thursday evening, March 15, for the benefit of the aged mother of Jimmy Elliott, did not nearly reach expectations, although several hundred dollars were realized from the sale of tickets, which amount was swollen by contributions of one hundred dollars from John L. Sullivan and fifty dollars from Harry Hill, with probably donations from other sympathizers. The entertainment was of an interesting character, a number of good boxers having volunteered their services, while one of the bouts was very exciting. This was a set-to between Nick Murphy, the whilom pedestrian and winner of the O'Leary American belt, and Jimmy Fox, which partook of the nature of a glove-fight, and, Murphy being the heavier, stronger man, and the better hitter, punished his antagonist quite severely during the two rounds they sparred, knocking him all about the stage in the opening round, and hit him down with a round wrist blow on the chin in the second. Fox fell as though shot, and it was seen that the blew had rendered him senseless. Bob Smith quickly went to his assistance, and, raising his head to his lap, applied remedies which after the lapse of a few minutes restored him to consciousness, when he was assisted from the stage, whence Murphy had previously taken his departure, apprehensive of the results of the blow which had laid his opponent low. The commotion created among the spectators by the incident was great, many dreading serious consequences. Steve Taylor and George Rooke also engaged in a lively exchange of compliments, and displays that in the main were well worth witnessing were made by Frank Wilson and Joe Fowler, Charley McCoy and Frank King, Jim Murray and Tom Allen, Dan Dougherty and Fiddler Neary, Sam Collyer and Mike Mullery, Jack Connell and Mike Conway, Davis and White, and Mike Donovan and Pete McCoy. Conway received an ugly cut over the eye during his engagement, and this was the cause of a caution from Police-inspector Thorne that the slugging must cease, but for which the wind-up between Mike and Pete would doubtless have had some fire in it. Ryan and Dempsey also gave an exhibition of square-hold wrestling, and Harry Munroe swung clubs in a way that brought forth applause. Frank Whittaker officiated as M. C., Uncle Bill Tovee being prevented by illness from acting in that capacity.

TOM KELLY AND JUNE DENNIS engaged in a soft-glove contest at Harry Maynard's Sporting-palace, San Francisco, Cal., March 3. The house, which is commodious, was crowded by a very respectable assemblage. Eighteen rounds were fought, the Queensberry rules governing, and

BOXING ON BODY BRUSSELS.

A telegraphic dispatch from Pittsburg, Pa., gives a general account of a milling-match between novices, alleged to have taken place at the residence of a wealthy gentleman in Western Pennsylvania, from which we extract the following: "A prize-fight, one of the most novel on record, occurred this morning (March 16) in the parlor of a private residence three miles from Altoona. The place where the fight came off is owned by Colonel Rohme, a gentleman who is very wealthy. The parlor had Brussels carpet on the floor and the walls were hung with pictures. In the centre of the room, a very large one, a ring was marked out with chalk on the carpet, and on the top of this chalk-mark silver sand was spread. In a room adjoining this all kinds of liquors could be had, as could also a small lunch. These things were all furnished by the Colonel. Probably thirty persons were in attendance. At 1.15 the principals in the fight, John O'Neal of Pittsburg and James Kohne of Philadelphia, came into the parlor. They were clothed with trunks and long stockings. When they came into the room Colonel Rohme shook hands with them and said: 'Gentlemen, it is not often such a nice place can be selected for a fight, so now I want you to do the best you can, and the man who comes out winner I will present him with $50 in gold.' Thirty-three rounds were fought, the first blood being drawn by O'Neal in the first round. At the close of the thirty-third round O'Neal was decided the winner. Both men were battered up badly, though neither was seriously hurt. Kohne appeared to have received the worst of the fight, but O'Neal had more cuts on his face than his opponent. After the fight was over the stakes were turned over to O'Neal. Colonel Rohme, the referee, came up and shook hands with the fighters. He gave the winner the $50 in gold which he had promised. The fight was arranged by two Philadelphians named Crum and Charles and two Pittsburgers named Fisher and McCree. At first the men were to fight for $500, but when they arrived at Altoona they decided to fight for $1,000 a side. The balance of the purse was put up then and there, and John Coyne was chosen stakeholder."

COMMERCIAL ATHLETIC CLUB.—This sport-loving Boston organization held their usual weekly meeting at the clubroom on Thursday evening, March 15, over three hundred members and friends being present. Those exponents of the art fistique who appeared in costume and made things lively were Young Daly and Johnny Murphy, Sweeney and Patsey Gallagher, Jimmie Carroll of Boston and Harry Ulmah of Canada, Dannie Foley of East Boston and George Godfrey of Chelsea, Prof. Bagley of Boston and Jimmie Slattery of Philadelphia, and John Kilrane of Somerville and J. Turner of Boston. Billy Kivlan and Ralph Lord wrestled two bouts, collar-and-elbow, each gaining a fall. The wind-up was between the veterans Scottie and Uncle Bill Busby, in which they introduced a number of new and side-splitting features. Billy Mahoney and Dannie Gill acted as masters of ceremonies.

FOOLISH.—John L. Sullivan during his semi-occasional visits to this fast city not infrequently contrives to get "a little off" through immoderate indulgence in high-priced beverages while making the rounds of the sporting houses, and when not himself seems peculiarly liable to give utterance to remarks that are ill-advised and do not sound well coming from a man occupying the position held by him. Speeches such as that voluntarily made by him from Harry Hill's stage on the evening of March 14 are not creditable to him, can only tend to injure him in the estimation of the public, and, while affording his enemies much satisfaction, are listened to and read of with regret by those who are his real friends, who admire his straightforwardness, earnestness of purpose and antipathy to deception and humbug, and whose good opinion is certainly worth retaining.

BILLY MADDEN and his English champion Charles Mitchell are now, if they have had good luck, more than half-way on the voyage to America, having sailed from Liverpool March 15 on the Britannic, which should land them in this city on Friday or Saturday of this week. Mitchell's farewell benefit took place at Prof. Waite's room, 19 Brewer street, Regent street, London, 12, and Prof. Donnelly wound up with him. Admission was fixed at $2.50. We have not heard the result. Among those who contributed towards the expense of the belt then presented to Mitchell were Geo. W. Moore (of Moore & Burgess' Minstrels) and Mr. Blacklock, each giving $25.

WHO WILL BE FIRST?—Doubtless one or more of our eligible middleweights will stand ready to "take on" the English champion boxer Charles Mitchell upon his arrival upon our shores. He has performed so well upon the other side, even when opposed by men much bigger in every way than himself, that there will be great curiosity to see him "put up," and he may confidently calculate on having a big house when he announces his intention to spar in public. No one here has as yet made known his intentions regarding the newcomer.

JOE COBURN will be the recipient of a testimonial benefit at Music-hall, Albany, N. Y., on Tuesday evening, March 27. He will present a strong bill of attractions in the boxing-line, with other features, and will receive the professional assistance of a number of sparrers, etc., from this and other cities, in addition to local talent. The crowning attraction, however, will be a display of science by the beneficiary and John L. Sullivan—an announcement which in itself should suffice to jam the house. Jim Killorin will be the M. C.

PADDY RYAN is now installed in his new quarters, at 346 State street, Chicago, Ill., being the place formerly carried on by Clynes & Hogan. It is said to be one of the best restaurants in the Lake City, and Paddy runs it right.

Remarks on Openings.

BY "TRAMPERAS, C. C. N. M."

Spayth's formula for the second form is the first seven moves, adding to the second form 25 to 22 and 11 to 16, these being the next two moves of Anderson's variation 1. Lengthening an opening to seven moves is objectionable on general principles. In this instance it is no improvement, as it limits the scope of the game. It has been but little followed, and Anderson's rule or rules should be the standard. Drummond, on pages 64, 65, 66, 67 and 68, gives this game first form, as does "Game of Draughts," variation 38; Spayth's irregular variation 18; "Game of Draughts," variations 137 and 138 on second form; so also is Drummond's variation K; Whilter, on page 27; "Bohn's Games," 46 and 52, and variations to 52; on this opening in both forms, "Game of Draughts," variation 40; and Spayth's irregular, variation A to variation 5, are Spayth's form; of eighteen CLIPPER games sixteen are first form, one second, and one is Spayth's; of the eighteen games fifteen are correctly named, one is unnamed, one is improperly called Bristol, and one is unclassified. A copy of this game, is however, given subsequently, and properly named Glasgow. Anderson includes all. Should Spayth's rule prevail, many Glasgow games of the second form would be excluded.

Fife.—This opening is formed by the first five moves, thus:

Black.	White.	Black.	White.
1..11 to 15	23 to 19	3.. 5 to 9
2.. 9 14	22 17

Drummond gives this opening and name on pages 15, 16 and 17 (second edition). On page 24 he gives the same opening improperly, naming it Whilter. In "Game of Draughts," variation 35, is this opening. In nineteen CLIPPER games this opening is correctly named.

Souter.—This opening is formed by the first five moves, thus;

Black.	White	Black.	White.
1..11 to 15	23 to 19	3.. 6 9
2.. 9 14	22 17

Drummond gives this game and name on pages 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47 and 48; "Game of Draughts," variation 112; and "Bohn's Handbook," Games 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44 and 45 are this opening; of twelve CLIPPER games all are correctly named "Souter."

NOTES FOR STUDENTS, BY THE EDITOR.

(a) 26 to 23 is the trunk-move. See "A. C. P." 21 to 17 draws. See Variation 1, as above.

(b) Barker gives 26 to 23 here, drawing. See variation 6, "A. C. P.," for 24 to 19. 24 to 20 is not given.

(c) Black's position is manifestly superior.

(d) Immediately fatal. 15 to 11 appears more promising. Why not try it?

CHESS.

To Correspondents.

F. M. TEED, City.—Accept our thanks. Like all your prized contributions, this came at the best time. We always did believe, with the veteran Walker, that the winner of a fine game was in the best possible position of all persons to annotate it acceptably.

H. E. AND J. BETTMAN, Cincinnati.—The problem you cite was the last of your previous contribution, and appeared as No. 1,356, Dec. 16, '82.

F. B. PHELPS.—Read our answer to "F. M. T.," and appropriate it to yourself.

WM. LAWRENCE, City.—We are not sufficiently conversant with Mr. Teed's private history to decide your bet authoritatively. Address the gentleman himself at 66 St. John's place, Brooklyn.

Herr Wilhelm Steinitz.

A prised, careful and reliable contributor, in writing us a resume of the late metropolitan campaign and the chess situation left by it, says: "A great deal of general interest in chess matters has been excited by the visit of Herr Steinitz. Personally, Herr S. has made a good impression. From the decidedly uncomplimentary remarks made from time to time in certain English periodicals, one might have inferred that he was an —ogre, or something worse, knowing nothing but chess, and not so very much of that. However, we found him to be a very intelligent and well-informed man, and not unamiable when carefully handled. One of the officers of the Manhattan C. C. said that he had never met a man who could talk so well upon any and all subjects as Herr Steinitz."..... "It has been decided by the club's directory to send Capt. Mackenzie to compete in the London International. I do not think that anyone else is likely to go from this country—unless perhaps Ware of Boston, who may 'go in for the fun of the thing, and not with great prize-taking expectations,' as he puts it."....."A tournament for the championship of the M. C. C. will probably be started some time this month. Messrs. Delmar, Ryan, Simonson, De Visser and other strong players are likely to enter, I suppose. The club is in a very prosperous condition. Located in Fourteenth street, opposite Steinway Hall; about 175 active members and a good cash balance of over $600 on hand. Happy state of affairs!—happy club!"

PRIZE-BEARERS.—The prizes for the best two original problems in The Cincinnati Commercial-Gazette's Sixth Tourney (three-moves) have been awarded to our contributors H., E. and J. Bettman, and to A. B. Block, Galveston, Texas.....The Sixth (?) Problem Tourney of The Detroit Free Press has also been decided, but the names of the winners are not yet announced. There was a prize each in 2, 3 and 4 moves. See our enigma this week.

ONE BY ONE!—England has to lament the demise of the veteran problematist J. Stonehouse, aged 74; and Germany that of the universally-known, enthusiastic master Herr Carl Pitschel, at the early age of 54.

MASON-FISHER.—The latest score of this match, Mr. M. giving P and move, was: Mason, 4; Fisher, 2. Five games carry the victory.

(a) Against "book," but not bad, throwing Black at once upon the time-limit—30 moves per hour.

(b) White, having made all safe about his K, forces an opening in the centre, while Black, through the advance of his pawns, finds his K uncomfortably exposed.

(c) A very forcible move! If Black reply 25..B × P; 26..Kt × B, Kt × Kt; 27..Q to R 7 +, K to B sq; 28..Q B to his 5 +, and wins.

(d) "A good shot," I take it—gives up a P, but opens the file for K R, and brings a Kt into play "with terrible effect."

(e) If 31..Q to R 2; 32..Q to K B 6, and there are two or three rather pretty variations—sacrificing the "exchange," etc., White always getting the better of it.

(f) Not because he fears its capture, which would be bad play, but playing for what actually happened two moves later. If 34..Kt to Q 4, Black might reply 34..K B to K 4.

(g) Exchanging Rooks first is also good—perhaps better than the line of play adopted, because leading to simplifications and economy of "brain-work."

(h) Threatening to win Q by Q R × P +, and also challenging the troublesome Q B; but 41..Q B to Kt 3 is better play.

(i) As White can thus leave his Q en prise, small chance remains for his opponent. The reply is a sort of "forlorn hope."

(k) There is a pretty termination if Black 45..B × B, viz.: 45..Q to K R 7 +, K to B sq; 47..R to Q B 8 † etc.

A consoling assurance to those suffering from Piles, that Swayne's Ointment will cure the worst case.—Telegraph.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

☞ QUESTIONS THAT DO NOT REACH THIS OFFICE UNTIL TUESDAY MORNING WILL NOT BE ANSWERED UNTIL THE FOLLOWING WEEK.

J. J. M., Boston.—1. Apply to a printer or publisher. 2. No pecified number of songs are needed in a songster. 3. It is a matter of opinion which is the best songster, and in this department we do not express opinions.

F. R. W., Webster City.—1. State "the number of bets," or at least a few of them. 2. To begin with, we do not give the ages of professionals, more especially ladies, either to decide bets or for any other purpose.

J. C.—1. See answers in another column. 2. A piece called "The Twelve Temptations" has been very heavily played in this country.

H. W., Chicago.—1. Your numerous questions would take up a week of our time, at least, in order to answer them. 2. Tony Denier has been before the public ever since he was old enough to be carried on as Cora's child in "Pizarro." 3. There have been performers doing a skating-act who called themselves the Curtis Brothers. 4. It is the same Dominick Murray. 5. Frank Aiken was manager of a theatre in your city. It was known as Aiken's Theatre. 6. He is still on the stage. He plays leading juveniles. 7. The drama of "The Soldier's Trust" was first produced here under that name about six years ago. 8. G. C. Boniface is not playing in it yet. 9. It is a matter of individual opinion as to which character Clara Morris or anybody else excels in. Some people prefer her in one part, and others in another. 10. We do not know that it is. It is just as likely to be an old play or old plays rewritten.

A. H. B.—1. It should be written "Mr. Charles R. Thorne Jr." To drop the "Jr." would be to inferentially designate the senior Mr. Charles R. Thorne. The "Mr." is a sign of respect only, and therefore should not be dropped. It would seem that you have got the question of "Mr." and "Esq." mixed with this. These two should never be used together, and in this country "Esq." should not be used. 2. It would require us to search for many hours in order to ascertain whenever Charles Fechter played in "Monte Cristo" in this city, so as to say positively whether the house in which he played oftenest was called the Broadway Theatre or Wood's Museum when he appeared there as Edmond Dantes. Probably your question is not of sufficient importance to justify such a search.

J. T. L., Baltimore.—1. Address him in care of THE CLIPPER Post-office. It is unreasonable to ask us to furnish whereabouts or addresses of professionals, in the face of the fact that we have for so many years maintained a post-office by which professionals can be reached at no cost other than letter-postage. We gratuitously advertise that we have letters for them, and that is enough for us to do, without hunting them up and devoting our space in this column to making their presence known. If a performer is thought to be with a particular troupe, there is no use in writing to us to learn where that troupe is. Such information, when we have it, is to be found among our news items. The object of this column is not to reprint our news items in order to enable parties to dispense with reading our amusement pages. This department is designed for the accommodation of the regular weekly readers of THE CLIPPER, and is not a whereabouts bureau to be consulted as a matter of convenience. 2. He is not dead.

C. T. J., Martinsburg.—1. It is against our rule to answer such questions in a greater number than one or two to every one inquirer; but we shall make an effort in part to oblige you. 2. The ages we cannot undertake to give, as our publication of them in this column would be accepted by many as an endorsement of their correctness, whereas accuracy in such a matter is often out of the question. 3. Lena Edwin is still in the profession. 4. Ida Leslie, March 24, 1874. 5. Conways, Sept. 7, 1874, and April 28, 1875—the gentleman first. You have the initials transposed when you write them B. F. 6. Charlotte Cushman, Feb. 18, 1876. 7. Westerns—Lucille, Jan. 11, 1877; Helen, Dec. 11, 1868. 8. Davenport, Sept. 1, 1877. 9. Matilda Heron, March 7, 1877. 10. Booth, Nov. 23, 1852. 11. Keene, Nov. 4, 1873. 12. Charles A. Fechter, Aug. 4, 1879. 13. H. J. Montague (the English one), Aug. 11, 1878. 14. E. A. Sothern, Jan. 20, 1881.

NO SIGNATURE.—We do not make a practice of giving the ages of professionals. Had you stated the exact bet or the nature of the dispute, it is quite likely that we could settle it without "giving away" his age. It is not practicable for there to be either bet or dispute that needs for its determination the precise date of birth. It is doing pretty well to have the year of birth, and be anywhere near sure that it is right, in the case of a professional, and especially in the case of a dwarf.

M. Q., Meriden.—1. We do not know whether you could get on the stage or not. 2. You could sing the songs that are written for some other singer and are published. Scores of singers do this, although it is not regarded as strictly professional work. 3. You could demand nothing in the way of salary until you had proved that you are worth something. Take what the manager who engages you at the outset is willing to give.

CONSTANT READER, Hutchinson.—1. See answers in regular columns devoted to correspondents. 2. It is altogether a matter of personal opinion which is the best school, as you call it, for dramatic education. We do not in this department care to express mere opinions on any subject, and it is likewise antagonistic to a proper peace of mind to recommend one dramatic teacher above others.

MUTUAL, Norfolk.—1. A card of that size for four weeks would cost $57.60. 2. There is no use in our attempting to guess at the number of male and female performers and managers and agents in the amusement professions. There are thousands of persons in this week, out next month, and in again the month after that.

W. E. P., Windsor.—1. If you mean when the Worrell Sisters first appeared in this city as actresses on the dramatic stage, they then came from California. 2. They opened here in Wood's Theatre. 3. The pieces were "The Elves" and "Nan the Good for-nothing." 4. It was in 1866.

SUBSCRIBER, St. Johnsville.—"Razorbacks" is a term used to designate the men who, under the direction of a boss, load and unload the show trains at the depots. W. W. Durand, the well-known circus agent, writes us that he is unable to say why they are so called, or by whom the nickname was first applied.

DECORAH.—State the dispute. Actors are not weighed and measured, as athletes are. The weight and height of actors are both constantly varying, according as their business is good or bad. When it is good, they get "the big head" on, which increases their height several inches.

CIRCUS.—1. Read our amusement pages from week to week. 2. It need not be addressed in care of anyone. The individual's name and the circus with which he is employed, together with its locality, will insure its delivery.

CONSTANT READER, Leadville.—1. An elephant has been born in this country. 2. The mother was the property of Cooper & Bailey. 3. In that case the period of gestation was twenty and a half months.

J. H. R., Baltimore.—1. It does not take two nights to play "Across the Continent." That is an American drama, not a Chinese one. 2. See regular column of answers. 3. No one has ever been the recognized champion clog-dancer.

INQUIRER, Cleveland.—1. "The Duke's Motto" is from the French of Paul Feval—"Le Bossu," as his drama was called. 2. "The King's Butterfly" is a version of the French play "Fanfan la Tulipe," by Paul Meurice.

R. C., Le Mars.—The only advice we have to offer to thousands who write us upon the same subject that you have chosen is—Don't go onto the stage. There are hundreds more seeking for an opening than there are vacancies to fill.

MRS. K.—1. The right names, the age and domestic relations of all the parties you inquire about are private matters that do not concern us. 2. Twenty cents a line. 3. Nov. 4, 1864, fell on Friday.

SUBSCRIBER, Rochester.—J. H. Stoddart is a brother of the one who has for some seasons past been with "The Widow Bedott" Combination.

is to be "The Royal Slave," and the chief interpreter will probably be Loo Chin Goon, the great "sing-song man," or Chinese actor, of whose visit American newspapers have of late had not a little to say.....There has been much perplexity with reference to choosing a suitable name for the old Wallack's Theatre. It has at last been decided to call it not the Manhattan, but the Star Theatre. Perhaps the idea of this is to give the house additional brilliancy. This may seal its doom; for have we not been told that "Death loves a shining mark?".....Mrs. Langtry is not having triumphs all to herself. Miss Genevieve Ward, an American abroad, is just now enjoying "A Great Catch" in London, Eng. It may be as well to explain that this is not another Freddie. It is a new piece brought out in celebration of St. Patrick's Day at the Olympic Theatre, and is from the pen of Hamilton Aide, who many years ago wrote one of the most beautiful songs, "The Blue Alsatian Mountains," known to English melody.....While making a note of things far off, it is proper to acknowledge the enterprise of those who are managing the famous exhibition in London still known as Mme. Tussaud's. They have purchased Kavanagh's car, which played so important a part in the Phœnix Park tragedy. Our Barnum must now hide his diminished head for a time.....We shall give P. T. B. a "pointer." In Los Angelos County, Cal., an African ostrich is laying eggs. This is the first case of the kind on record in this country, as California asserts. If Barnum cannot capture this ostrich, he should at least get its eggs for his Easter opening at Madison-square Garden.....Two Counts from Colorado are at present the rage in amusement circles in San Francisco. They are French Counts, and have prospered by running cattle-ranches in Colorado. They are now running after a pair of comely maidens attached to a troupe performing in one of the San Francisco theatres, into whose laps the ranchmen are unloading some of their superfluous wealth. As the story goes, if one makes present of a valuable piece of jewelry to the fair one he worships, the other Count at once "heads the trick" by playing a higher trump in the shape of a costlier gift to the object of his adoration; and it is added that all the resident "mashers" of San Francisco stand afar off, paralyzed by the reckless show of munificence now making by these Coloradians, one of whom recently gave a most expensive dinner to the entire troupe of which his beloved is a member. Marriageable actresses should flock West while the Counts are flush. .....When one of the pillars supporting the balcony gave way, the occupants of seats in the Cosmopolitan Theatre on the night of March 16 must have recalled the days of the Philistines and fancied that a Samson was tugging away with might and main down in the basement. But the basement is where the barroom is, and the only giant strength exerted there was just enough to "crook the elbow." Misfortune seems to attach to this building. Whether it is called the Cosmopolitan Theatre or something else, ill luck haunts it. Its career under its newest name, the Cosmopolitan, was begun ominously, its drop-curtain catching fire and threatening a panic, and now its balcony figures as apparently resting upon what was fatal to Lot's wife—a pillar of salt..... We have told this story before, but never of the brother of the composer Flotow, who died recently. It is always a touching tale, no matter of whom it is told; and, as we are constantly having new readers, it must always be fresh to some of them. The brother whose untimely taking-off cast a perpetual shadow upon the life of the composer, which possibly enabled him to live all the longer by protecting him against sunstroke, was a rather "wild" chap, and much given to practical jokes. One that he perpetrated in a half-drunken feat was regarded as an insult by the whole body of the Mecklenburg deputies, of whom he himself was one. A dozen challenges ensued, and young Flotow agreed to meet any single antagonist selected by lot. This, as it happened, turned out to be a certain count, one of the deputies who resented the offense most keenly. On Flotow's asking him if he thought a stupid joke worth fighting about, and receiving an emphatic answer in the affirmative, "Be it so," said the young man; "and if you attach as little value to life as I do, we will fight in the American fashion—I staking my life against yours in a game of ecarte of five points; the loser to blow out his brains in twenty-four hours." The proposition was agreed to, cards were brought and the two men commenced their terrible game. The score stood at four points on each side, when the count turned the king. "You have won, sir," said young Flotow, rising; "I will pay before noon to-morrow." Next day he slept till eleven o'clock. After breakfast he took a turn in the park, and was observed by his valet gazing for some minutes at the facade of the ancestral mansion; after which he hid his face in his hands for a moment, as if weeping. He then pulled out his watch; it wanted but five minutes of noon. M. Flotow entered his study. At twelve precisely the report of a pistol shook the window-panes. He had killed himself on time. .....The English Lord-chamberlain has put the seal of his official disapprobation upon Poet Robert Buchanan's new drama, because of its title, which was "God and Man." It has therefore been given another name. It is perhaps at least to be said in favor of the action of the English censor of plays that the original title could scarcely have been chosen for other than one reason, which is by no means a reverent one. It was doubtless chosen because it was thought that it would prove "catchy."....There is surely something "catchy" in the notice a Louisville, Ky., editor gave a manager the other day. He affectionately yet solemnly pronounced him "One of those whom God loves." No manager who has had such a newspaper endorsement as this could be so hard-hearted as to confront the editor, when he comes to the theatre, with the terrifying legend: "Free list suspended."....An Indiana correspondent, writing us as to the gratifying prosperity that has attended the efforts of Manager Fort of Baltimore, expresses the hope that "he'll never see Fort Wane in his success." To which we may add, in the expectation that some night the Baltimore manager may be toasted in this punning vein, that if Samuel managed the Knights (G. S. and Sophie) the Fort-Knight Combination couldn't be a week one.....The pitiful complaint that authors and composers are but poorly paid has been made so often, and in so many shapes, that almost everybody knows the harrowing details by heart. Yet we are assured upon the highest Dutch authority that during the past year the two court theatres in Vienna paid twenty-two thousand five hundred dollars to authors and composers, and the two court theatres of Berlin paid fourteen thousand dollars.....Most of our readers are by this time aware that the ambitious tragedian T. W. Keene is not to be allowed a chance to rival Barrett and McCullough on the occasion of the Dramatic Festival on the bank of the Rhine, otherwise Cincinnati. Hence these lines:

Our Thomas Keene does not appear
Indignant—nay, nor "ratty"—
Because he cannot "whoop 'em up"
With "the gang" in Cincinnati.
Well, since a natty actor's lost,
Porkopolis must bear it;
But, when he does play in that town,
He'll "make Rome howl," we'll swear it.

.....Evidently, the Londoners think that Henry Irving may starve to death over here, or become even leaner than he is. Otherwise they would scarcely think of tendering him a huge feed, æsthetically and euphemistically termed a banquet, on the eve of his departure for America. This is not necessary. We shall so gorge Henry with high-living and an abundance of it that his feet will be a memorial of his visit to this country as long as bandages can be got.....And this delicate hint as to gout permits us to point out that the first instance in which the physician figures in the Bible in his true role of murderer appears in Chronicles II, xvi. 12: "And Asa, in the thirty-ninth year of his reign, was diseased in his feet until the disease was exceedingly great; yet, in his disease, he sought not the Lord, but the physicians. And Asa slept with his fathers."....."Marc Quencher" the polyglot is still of a musical turn of thought, and has something to say this week on the subject of

DE DANDY ARRANGEMENTS.

Vonce, goot arrangements for orchestra of songs vas, in de lankvidge of some of de "perfesh," "grate." At bresent dhey are "dandy." McGaff, sing-und-dancer, says to McMurty, sketch-artist: "We botd sing de same song, cull; but I ve got de dandy arrangement, I have!" All mooscians who arrange und who vish to broberly bulferize "de perfesh" mit dheir vork must make "dandy" arrangements. How vas dhey made? Took dese "bointers," und you vill ketch on sveet. First, apofe all und eferyding, abbreciate bowerfully und reflectively de gapabilities of de Big Drum. Always vork it in. Kin you heard me? I can't talk too loud. Always vork in de zimpoom vhenefer dhere is a liding show to do it, or dhere vill be a "kick" in de neighporhoodt. De only oggasion vhen it might broberly be slighted vas during a recitation. At all oder times, howefer, ring it in for all it's vorth, not forgetting its side-partners, de cymbals. Don't forget, or your arrangements vas N. Y.—no yuse—und your front name vas mud. Alvays arrange so dot in case de berformer strikes a shmaller-sized orchestra (und he is likely to), de arrangement vill sound yoost as goet for von inshtruments as for ten. If you can fix it so it vill sound efen better, so much more de glory. Rememper dot trombones und gornets vas made to plow notes out of brincibally, so write up varm, red-hot barts for dhem shdrait dhrough (bizzicato, of course, excluded), und put in wery few of de usual bars of rests. Anypody kin arrange rests. Write notes. Give de flute de scales, up und down from von corner of de instrument to the oder so fast vat kin be plown up und pack und round again, incer-versa ad libitum et cetera. Work dis in de first chorus, und de segund time give de clarinett de same scheme. Dis is "wariations"—dis is "lace-vork," und "kills" de beformer ef'ry time. "Oh! pards! jest hear dat flute snap! Aint she a hummer?" Besides de brincibal melody, write anoder leetle-von-for-a-cent, vich vill "blend." Quite easy, and anoder "killer." Some call it "fugue," Vhy I don't know! Und nopody else, too! But dhey like it, und you kin git 50 cents more. Vork it in, my frendt. Vonce in a while, howefer, you shtrike a "new von" vot aint up to it. A moosical frendt of mine shbent a leetle time building two melodies togedder like dis, but de team was disgusted. Dhey said he put in anoder tune vich didn't belong dhere! Dhey vas put out. So vas he. He fainted severely, and now arranges only for de gentle goncertina. Alvays write "Introduction" before de few bars vich brecede de song, as somepody might dink it vas de mittle of de biece; und write in a key vich can be at vonce dranspoxed a half-a-tone or a half-a-dozen tones cider vay, as reqvested. Leave room at bottom of de sheet so's some komical second-violin player kin write funny dings apout de arrangements, and write on top de sheet "De man vat arranged dis is dead!" so's de berformer kin hear vat real goot gags de moosicians kin make if dhey really vish to. Instructify yours, MARC QUENCHER.

CITY SUMMARY.

OWEN FAWCETT is to retire from the Union-square Theatre this week. He has been especially engaged by Dion Boucicault to play the principal comedy role in "Vice Versa" at the Star Theatre (Wallack's old Theatre), commencing March 26.

MARRIED.—Elsey McHenry Train, a son of George Francis Train, and Eliza Willing Browne, a stepdaughter of the late Charles R. Thorne Jr., were married March 15. The ceremony took place in the City Hall, and was performed by Mayor Edson. The bride, who wore a brown traveling suit, was accompanied by her mother and Miss Train. The groom, who was attired in a light plaid Spring suit, was attended by his brother, George Francis Train Jr. His father was not present, but sent a basket of buttonhole bouquets for distribution among the clerks in the Mayor's office.

A SCARE.—During the performances at the Cosmopolitan Theatre on the night of March 16, when the auditorium was crowded, one of the iron columns near the stage, supporting the balcony, shot downwards through the floor, causing a portion of the balcony to settle with a loud, crashing noise. Some person cried "Fire!" and a rush was made for the doors; but a panic was averted and quiet was restored. Many persons, however, subsequently left the theatre.

THATCHER, PRIMROSE & WEST'S MINSTRELS closed a week's season at the Cosmopolitan Theatre March 17. Business was very large.

MISS HELEN BARRY, an English actress, who has been in the country for some time, is to play four weeks, commencing May 14, supported by her own company, in a city theatre.

RISTORI is considering the feasibility of again visiting us next Fall to play some of her chief roles in English.

T. J. WEST, who has been in advance of Minnie Hauk's Co., sailed for Europe in the Arizona March 20 to negotiate engagements for her during the coming Summer. He is to return in August.

MRS. LANGTRY is to attempt the role of Galatea in "Pygmalion and Galatea," during her next engagement in this city, at the Fifth-avenue Theatre.

IT IS NOW SETTLED that Mr. and Mrs. Kendal will not visit this country for some years at least, as Mr. Kendal and Mr. Hare have leased the St. James Theatre, London, for five years.

"A MUDDY DAY" will shortly succeed "McSorley's Inflation" at the Theatre Comique.

LUDWIG BARNAY, the eminent German actor, on March 19 at Delmonico's enjoyed a complimentary breakfast, which had been tendered him by a number of prominent actors and journalists. There were about fifty guests, and Lawrence Barrett presided. Speeches were made by John Gilbert, Lester Wallack, John T. Raymond, W. J. Florence, Lawrence Barrett, Osmond Tearle, Harry Edwards and others. Herr Barnay, owing to his unfamiliarity with the English language, was compelled to respond in German, and Carl Schurz interpreted his remarks. Harry Edwards took advantage of the occasion to suggest the founding of a dramatic library in this city, and over $700 were at once subscribed.

THE ATTENDANCE at Miner & Canary's Eighth-avenue Theatre on Monday evening, March 19, was fairly good, and the fresh feast of fun was partaken of with relish. The proceedings opened with the farce of "A Big Mistake," in which F. J. Huber, Louis Robie, J. H. Pyne, Lizzie Derious and Kitty Allyne appeared, and this laughable introductory was followed by Maude Clifton in serio-comic songs; Bryant and Saville, musical comedians; Chas. T. Ellis and Clara Moore in their very entertaining sketch "Love's Labor;" the Martells in acrobatic performances and bicycle-riding; McIntyre and Heath, Ethiopian comedians, singers and dancers; J. W. Meyers, baritone-vocalist; Devlin and Tracey in their sketch entitled "Dan and Teddy's Parting," supplemented with capitally executed dances; Lester and Williams in neat songs and dances; Clara Moore in an excellent selection of songs, which were rendered in a very effective manner; Charles and Thomas O'Brien, gymnasts and acrobats, who both pleased and astonished; James F. Hoey, appropriately styled "The Idiosyncratic;" the entertainment being brought to a close with McIntyre and Heath's amusing absurdity called "Gentlemen of Leisure," Dan Tracey, J. W. Meyers and Maude Clifton assisting.

AT THE MT. MORRIS THEATRE March 19 Frank Mayo in "Davy Crockett" opened to a good house. Maud Granger in the "Planter's Wife" is the next attraction 26.

THE RENTZ-SANTLEY NOVELTY AND BURLESQUE Co. occupy the stage of the London Theatre the current week, and on Monday were greeted by an audience that quite filled the house. The entertainment opened with the musical interlude of "Our Social Club," something after the style of a female-minstrel performance; then Barney Reynolds, vocalist, appeared, followed by Dixey and Leyton, ideal sketch-artists; Harry Morris in his German characterizations; Lottie Elliott, who made quite a favorable impression as a skipping-rope dancer; the Novelty Supreme Four—the Misses Payne, Abecco, Florence, and Sutherland—in glees, medley songs, etc.; Harrington and Johnson, song-and-dance artists; the Bordeaux Sisters—Ella and Lottie—in their refined songs-and-dances; Dutch Daly, comedian, vocalist and concertina soloist; and, to conclude the show, the burlesque of "The Daughter's Banker" was given by the company. The benefit tendered to James Donaldson Jr. and Edwin A. Bull, the treasurer, takes place afternoon and evening of March 29.

THE NATIONAL THEATRE was fairly packed with people on Monday night, when W. T. Melville appeared, impersonating the negro character of Smoke in "The Pirates of the Chesapeake," supported by the company. The preceding variety olio included a series of attractive specialties by Ned Lang and Viola Rosa, the German duo; Alex. Wilson, ventriloquist; Healey and Saunders, clog-dancers; Prof. Abt, stereopticon illustrations; Pat Reilly, Irish impersonator and vocalist; and Emerson and Clark, comedians.

"PINAFORE" was brought to the surface again at the Standard Theatre March 17. The cast in several of the roles is an excellent one, and the opera is given in most pleasing fashion. A full and attractively-dressed chorus adds to the effect. The cast includes Marie Conron as Josephine; Miss Jarbeau, Hebe; Mme. Julie De Ruyther, Buttercup; J. H. Ryley, Sir Joseph; William Hamilton, Captain Corcoran; Wallace Macreery, Ralph Rackstraw; J. H. Stuart, Dick Deadeye; A. Henderson, Boatswain; and Master Montgomery, Midshipmite. There was a good attendance on Saturday night and a light one on Monday. The opera will probably be on for two weeks, to be followed by "The Mascot."

MUSICAL NOTES.—Patti reappeared at the Academy of Music March 14 as Leonora in "Il Trovatore." Nicolini was the Manrico, Mme. Scalchi Azucena, and Galassi Conte di Luna. "Lucia" was on 16, with Patti in the title-role and Ravelli as Edgardo. The ballet "La Surprise," with Mme. Cavalazzi, was given also. "La Sonnambula" was presented matinee 17, with Albani as Amina and Ravelli as Elvino. Patti sang in "Semiramide" 19, with Mme. Scalchi as Arsace and M. Durat as Assur.....Mme. Theo arrived here from Havana 16 and appeared at the Casino 17 in "La Jolie Parfumeuse." She sang also at the Sunday-night concert at that house 18. Other members of the company and the orchestra filled out the remainder of the bill. Mme. Theo appeared 19 in "L'Archiduc."....The Philharmonic Club played at Chickering Hall 13. Mr. Neupert was the pianist of the occasion.....The New York Chorus Society and Orchestra under Theodore Thomas' direction gave Bach's cantata "My Spirit was in Heaviness" and Schumann's "Scenes from Goethe's 'Faust.'" The soloists were Ida Hubbell, Miss Henne, Belle Cole, and Messrs. Remmertz and Toedt.....Clara Louise Kellogg sailed for Europe 17.....P. S. Gilmore takes a benefit 26 at the Twenty-second Regiment Armory. A concert and dancing are the features.....Lillian Russell sang at the Sunday-night concert 18 at the Cosmopolitan Theatre.....Nilsson appeared in concert at Steinway Hall 19. Miss Glenn, Sig. Del Puente, Mr. Giese, 'cello-player, and Mr. Schnitzler, violinist, were also in the programme, with an orchestra under Theodore Thomas' direction. Biorksten did not appear, being on the sick-list....."The Mascot" was done in fairly pleasing fashion at the Fifth-avenue Theatre 19. To Henry E. Dixey's funny impersonation of Lorenzo, whatever success the piece obtained, is mainly due. Letitia Fritch was an attractive-looking Bettina, but made her usual fault apparent of overacting the part. Hattie Richardson was the Fiametta; Alonzo Hatch appeared as Frederick, W. Paul Bown was the Rocco, and Eugene Clark Pippo. The chorus was not in the best form. There was a light attendance.....The Jullien Concerts at the Casino had no attraction for the public, and the house was closed Thursday and Friday evenings, preceding Theo's appearance.

A NEW MUSEUM.—Theodore Hellman, president of the Eden Musical Grevin American Company, has filed a plan in the Bureau of Buildings for the erection of a music and Winter garden at No. 55 West Twenty-third street, to extend to Twenty-fourth street. It is to have a frontage of seventy-five feet and a depth of 197ft. 6in., to be two stories high and to cost $150,000. It is to be conducted after the style of the Grevin Museum in Paris, France. Current events and distinguished personages are to be represented by wax figures. Paintings and Paris fashions are to be exhibited, and at the Twenty-fourth-street end will be a garden inclosed in glass, in which musical entertainments are to be given.

THE PRESENT SEASON at Daly's Theatre is to close April 7, and the company is to commence a tour (which is to extend to San Francisco, Cal.) in the Walnut-street Theatre, Philadelphia, 16. "Seven-Twenty-Eight" continues to draw largely, nearly all of the seats having been occupied on Monday night last.

TONY PASTOR'S FOURTEENTH-STREET THEATRE was crowded on the evening of March 19, when the popular proprietor provided a varied programme, commencing with the sketch called "A Woman of a Few Words," in which Florence Bell, Bebe Vining, Joe Buckley and Frank Girard appeared to advantage; Harry Mack then displayed much skill in an equilibristic act with globes, barrel and cross, and was loudly applauded; Florence D. Kellogg in popular ballads earned approval; Fred Hallen and Enid Hart appeared in the musical interlude entitled "Over the Stile," in which both their vocalism and acting seemed to be keenly relished; Dan Collyer in his sketch "A Doctor for an Hour" caused plenty of merriment; Tony Pastor in comic and topical songs was as amusing and well appreciated as ever; Lester and Allen in their Ethiopian eccentricities and imitations were highly diverting and elicited hearty applause. The performance concluded with a new burlesque on "Billee Taylor, or the Lass who Loved the Sailor," which was favorably received and afforded much amusement. We append the cast: Phœbe, Rose Temple; Captain Barnacle, Jacques Kruger; William, Flora Irwin; Sir Wellington Lance, Frank Girard; Chris Lobster, the schoolmaster, Frank Budworth; Eliza, Enid Hart; Bella, Florence D. Kellogg; Susanna, Bebe Vining. Rose Temple, who made her first appearance here this season, scored a success as Phœbe, and Jacques Kruger—with an inimitable make-up—was extremely funny as Captain Barnacle; Mlle. Elise danced a sailor's hornpipe in the second scene, and secured well-merited applause. The complimentary matinee-benefit to Treasurer Harry S. Sanderson will take place March 22, when Harry and John Kernell, William Carroll, Bob Slavin, Henshaw and Ten Broeck, Jennie Morgan, the Girards and other volunteers will appear, in addition to the regular company, in a mammoth programme, which, irrespective of the beneficiary's merits, should attract a large attendance. "Muldoon's Picnic," with Harry Kernell as Muldoon and Dan Collyer as Mulcahey, will be presented here 26, with Wood, Beasley and the Weston Brothers, William Carroll, Nimmie Kent and Maud Beverly as the other new attractions.

HARRY MINER'S BOWERY THEATRE was well attended on Monday evening last, when the following attractions for this week were seen: John and Louisa Till, with their Royal Marionettes; James W. Kearney in his Irish specialties and imitations; Williams and Morton, Lancashire clog-dancers; McCarthy and Monroe in their Chinese-Irish sketch "Grogan's Chinese Laundry," which has lost none of its power to amuse; Charles H. Stanley, vocalist; Fannie Beane and Charles Gilday in their new sketch "The Salvation Army," with songs-and-dances; Fox and Ward, song-and-dance artists; William Carroll in banjo-solos and funny sayings; the Olympia Quartet—Hugh Mack, William Keough, M. J. Sullivan and P. Randall—in their specialty "The Independent Colored Cadets;" Sam Holdsworth, vocalist, with quick changes, in conjunction with Miss Bioletti Amadi, who performs well on the cornet; and Maggie Cline of "Mary Ann Kehoe" fame in her latest efforts, "The Old Feather-bed," etc. "Muldoon's Picnic" concludes the performance.

THE EFFECT OF HOLY WEEK upon the attendance at places of public amusement was clearly manifested at the Grand Opera-house March 19, when "The Corsican Brothers" Company from Booth's Theatre began a week's season in the presence of an audience which hardly filled one-half of the seats. As many changes have recently been made in the cast, the present distribution of characters is appended: Fabian and Louis, F. C. Bangs; Chateau Renaud, Frederic De Belleville; Montgiron, Henry Saint Maur; Meynard, Clinton Stuart; Martelli, W. C. Cowper; Colonna, Luke Martin; Orlando, Fred Lotto; Antonio Salona, T. F. McCabe; Criffo, W. Richardson; Jose, C. H. Hooper; Boissec, W. Ward; Francois, G. A. Anderson; Tomaso, A. G. Hutton; Surgeon, D. Beers; Emilie De Lesparre, Miss Clara Baker; Madame Dei Franchi, Miss Kate Meek; Estelle, Miss Lizzie Goode; Marie, Miss Ella Pferdner; Celestine, Miss Nettie Abbott; Coralie, Miss E. Herbert. "The Romany Rye" is to be produced 26.

UNSAFE.—Examiners of the Bureau of Buildings reported to the Inspector March 19 that they had made an examination of the Cosmopolitan Theatre and found it unsafe, for the reason that six iron columns supporting the balcony are not set upon solid foundations, the front line of girders to the balcony are not sufficiently strapped, and their ends abutting the box-posts near the stage are not properly tied and supported. The examiners recommend, among other things, that the building be made safe by putting bases of timber beneath the six iron columns. An order to carry into effect the recommendations of the examiners was issued at once by Inspector Estabrook.

THE FOURTH WEEK of "Siberia" in Haverly's Fourteenth-street Theatre opened March 19 to fair business.

CLOSED.—"Monte Cristo" was withdrawn at Booth's Theatre March 17, it having failed to draw a remunerative attendance. The theatre is to remain closed this week, and on the 26th a new version of Charles Reade's "Never Too Late to Mend" is to be produced, with new scenery and a strong cast.

THE SEASON of the San Francisco Minstrels is to close March 24. The changes in the programme for their final week included the appearance during the first-part of four endmen—Billy Birch and Billy Sweatnam, bones, and Charles Backus and Bob Slavin, tambos; the revival of the overture "Boccacio;" "Bob's Invitation," sung by Bob Slavin; "The Huckleberry Picnic," by Billy Sweatnam; "Let Me Hear Thy Voice Again," by Stanley Grey; and "Tidings of Comfort and Joy," by Charles Backus. Business fair.

AT NIBLO'S GARDEN J. K. Emmet has continued in "Fritz in England and Ireland" to audiences that have been delighted as few besides Fritz can delight them. Annie Pixley opens here March 26.

IN FRONT of the Theatre Comique speculators are not now kept so busy as heretofore, and the signs are that the present attraction will not outlast the season. Nevertheless, it it will be "A Muddy Day" before "McSorley's Inflation" collapses, probably early in April.

INJUNCTION CONTINUED.—Judge Brown of the U. S. Circuit Court on March 20 continued the injunction granted John A. McCaull to restrain Lillian Russell from singing elsewhere than under his management.

C. E. DOBSON'S PRIZE BANJO CONTEST, to take place at Steinway Hall April 30, promises to be a successful affair, according to all the reports received. The prizes, the players and many of the details connected with the tournament are referred to in the card in another column. A letter from S. S. Stewart, the well-known banjo-maker, to Manager F. B. Dobson, states that Horace Weston will certainly be among the players.

HYDE & BEHMAN advertise that they will open a new theatre, corner of Thirty-fifth street and Broadway, on Sept. 3, and first-class combinations desiring to arrange time for this city or Brooklyn are requested to communicate with them.

W. O. DALE STEVENS' AUSTRALIAN CIRCUS, at the Big Indian Wigwam, during the past week, played to standing-room only.

DRAMATIC.

AT THE BROOKLYN PARK THEATRE the attraction March 19 was "The White Slave," which was played to a fair-sized audience. Route: Troy, N. Y., 26, one week, Cosmopolitan Theatre, New York, April 2, two weeks. Next week "The Long Strike" Combination.

A COMPANY headed by Inez Rochelle produced "Only a Farmer's Daughter" at Haverly's Brooklyn Theatre March 19. Business light. J. K. Emmet will be the attraction week of 26.

CARROLL AND FREW in "Our Summer Boarders" drew fairly at Wagner's Opera-house, Bradford, Pa., March 16, going to Corning, N. Y., 18, 19, Ithaca 20.

FOREIGN SHOW NEWS.

NOVELTIES.

"Storm-beaten,"

a drama in a prologue and five acts, by Robert Buchanan, founded on his romance of "God and the Man," was produced in the Adelphi Theatre, London, Eng., March 14. A cable-message to The Telegram says:

"Its strong cast and elaborate scenic effects, added to its story of thrilling interest, combined to make the first performance exceptionally interesting. It attracted a large and brilliant audience, who extended an enthusiastic welcome to it. Hate and vengeance form the purpose of the play, which is mellowed by the wholesome moral of the impotence of human revenge. The hate in question exists between two families, and has been handed down for years from father to son on both sides. In the prologue the cause of the hatred is forcibly depicted. The bullying Squire Orchardson forecloses a mortgage on the farm belonging to the widow of an old tenant, Farmer Christianson. The pitiless act of the Squire is aggravated by his expression of pleasure when he sees the family begging for bread. The widow swears Kate to vengeance, and this brings the prologue to a close. The first act opens on the May-day revels. Richard Orchardson and Christian Christianson become unconsciously worse enemies than the wildest dreams of their forefathers could have foretold. Both love Priscilla Sefton, the daughter of a blind Wesleyan Methodist preacher. Unknown to either Christian or his mother, who dies of a broken heart, Richard has secretly loved Kate Christianson, whom he has betrayed under a promise of marriage. The charming scene of the crowning of the May-queen is here introduced, with a pastoral ballet and the May-pole brought in. By a grim satire of fate, Kate, who had been cast aside by her faithless lover in favor of Priscilla, is crowned queen. The story of the heartless betrayal is divulged to Christian by Priscilla, who has been Kate's confidant. The name of the betrayer, however, is not disclosed. This leads to the second act, where Sefton, who has been the guest of the Squire, is on the eve of going on a sea voyage for the benefit of his health, accompanied by his daughter. The Squire, learning that the preacher is rich, urges his son to press his suit, ultimately deciding that Richard should take passage on the same ship as the Seftons. This intention on the part of Richard coming to the ears of Kate, who has given birth to a child, she implores him to keep his promise and not forsake her. Ruthlessly flinging her aside, he flees, leaving Kate in a swoon, in which state she is found by Christian, who learns for the first time that his sister's betrayer is his old-hated rival. At this point the play is intensely dramatic and effective. With hand uplifted to heaven, Christian calls upon God to deliver into his hands the villain who wrought so much sorrow and calamity in his family. This curse, delivered with desperate earnestness, mingled with the hysterical shrieks of Kate, who apprehends the possible dreadful fate of the man she loves, is the most powerful situation in the piece, and brings down the curtain on the second act amid loud and ringing cheers. The third act introduces Priscilla on the deck of the Miles Standish, Richard earnestly pressing his suit and blackening his rival's character. A sailor, who has closely observed the whole scene, suddenly throws off his disguise and reveals Christian. He instantly flies at the throat of his enemy, but is put in irons for insubordination. Priscilla now knows the infamy of the man who followed her, and declares before him her love for Christian. Richard determines to take the life of his rival by burning the part of the ship in which he is confined. A fine scenic effect is now brought to the support of the play, representing the ship on fire. Christian is rescued from the hold just as the vessel strikes an iceberg, which enfolds her in huge masses of ice and crushes her. Amid the crash of falling masts and splitting timbers the two enemies are seen on an ice-floe locked in a deadly embrace, each endeavoring to force the other under the water. Richard is struggling in the midst of the broken ice as the curtain falls. The weakest portion of the play commences in the fourth act. The incidents are undramatic, tedious and painful. Two hungry and gaunt men are seen to meet each other on a desolate, sterile island. These are Richard and Christian, who have miraculously escaped death from drowning. Christian, seeing the man he hates doomed to die of starvation, cannot deny himself the pleasure of gloating over the sufferings of his enemy. This desire is reversed when Richard is at the point of death. Then Christian implores Heaven to save his life on the ground of loneliness. Scarcely has the prayer been uttered when the sound of cannon is heard and a boat appears. No one knows whether it rescues both or not. The curtain rises on the last act to the sound of the church-bells ringing an Easter peal. The villagers, with the old Squire bringing up the rear, enter the church to celebrate Easter-day. Two ladies dressed in deep mourning are seen standing at the door of a cottage opposite. A stranger, roughly clad, appears, evincing considerable emotion when he hears the singing of the Easter-hymn. He is addressed by one of the ladies, and immediately recognizes Kate. He then discloses himself as her brother. "Where is Richard?" fearfully asks Kate, at the same time recoiling from the embrace of the man she fears is her lover's murderer. The answer to her question is the immediate entrance of Richard, sound and hearty. He tells her how her brother saved his life and promised to amend the past by redeeming his promise of marrying her. Christian then folds Priscilla in his arms, and love is established on all sides, while guilt is, to the detriment of the piece, too easily condoned. So the curtain finally falls on a most unnatural and improbable termination of the story. Such a quarrel should only end—as it does in the novel—in the death of one, instead of both returning as boon companions to the home of their childhood, apparently without the shadow of the memory of the wretched past. All the actors did their best. Mr. Warner was especially energetic. The scenery was admirable, and the painter, Mr. Beverly, was summoned to receive hearty applause after the ice-scene. The author was also called at the close of the play, which is likely to have a long run, being fully up to the standard of Adelphi melodramas.

"NAMESAKES," a farce written by Horace Lennard, was produced at the Gaiety Theatre, London, Feb. 24 (matinee), and was favorably received.

"PITY," a pathetic drama in one act, by Arthur Shirley, was originally acted at the Crystal Palace, London, Feb. 27 (matinee), and met with success. It is an adaptation of "Grin-goire," first brought out in Paris in 1866.

"L'As de Trefle"

(The Ace of Clubs), a drama in five acts, by M. Pierre Decourcelle, was produced at the Ambigu, Paris, March 15, and, says a cablegram, "was a complete success. The author is a young man only twenty-five years of age. The piece is written in the style of the old melodramas, modernized and full of Parisian details amusing and picturesque. It abounds in improbabilities, but they are ingeniously worked out and interest the audience. The piece possesses two great elements of success—an admirable mise en scene and a remarkable interpretation. Sarah Bernhardt superintended the production of the piece, and the evidences of her taste and judgment were to be detected in the slightest details. The drama is likely to have a long and successful run at the Ambigu.

The story is concerned with the adventures of Dr. Marcel Bernier, who is accused of the murder of Julia D'Amberval, a woman of loose reputation, by M. Roberts, a member of the secret police. The arrest takes place in the presence of his betrothed, who is driven almost to despair. Marcel, however, keeps cool, and asks to be allowed an interview with the young lady. As soon as they are alone he says to his betrothed, giving her a sealed packet: "My dear Jeanne, this letter was given me by my mother, who told me to send it to the person to whom it is addressed if ever I should happen to be in danger. Take it and see that it reaches its destination." Jeanne looks at the envelope and sees that it is addressed to M. Roberts. Hearing his name uttered by the young lady, Roberts takes the letter from her and opens it, "Merciful God!" he cries. The man whom he has been doing his best to ruin, Marcel Bernier, is his own son. From that moment Roberts ceases to have any doubt of Bernier's innocence, and sets to work to track the real criminals. How can he discover them? He has but a single clue to their identity—a card, the ace of clubs, which the dead woman had on her person when she died. At first the police had attached very little importance to this card, for at the very moment she was struck down the victim was in the act of telling a fortune. On examining more carefully the pack of cards she had been using, however, they have found another ace of clubs, which, like the whole pack, has a blue back to it. Now, the card first picked up was white. It is, therefore, safe to conclude that the latter must have been let fall by one of the assassins, and all that is necessary to bring the crime home to the right person is to get hold of the rest of the white pack. Acting on this idea, Roberts starts on his mission full of hope, and a most exciting struggle begins between himself and the presumed murderers, whom he tracks first to a low drinking-place, then to a brasserie, and finally to the quay on the Seine at Auteuil, near the Pont du Jour. The assassins manage to "do for" several police-agents who accompany him, and Roberts himself is thrown into the Seine one night. Marcel Bernier would undoubtedly have been condemned to death, despite his father's self-sacrifice, if Nini Gendarme, hearing that Roberts had been a benefactor to her family twenty years before these events, had not, obeying a sudden impulse, confessed the truth. The real criminals are punished, Marcel Bernier is restored to liberty, Jeannie de Croix-Vieux becomes his wife, and M. Roberts leaves the police-force.

"A Great Catch,"

a new three-act comedy of modern manners, by Hamilton Aide, was produced at the Olympic, London, March 17 (matinee) by Miss Genevieve Ward, in aid of the School of Dramatic Art. A cablegram to The Herald says: "Miss Ward sustains the principal role—that of the Hon. Mrs. De Motteville, the poor relative of an aristocratic family, who neglect and insult her till she suddenly receives a heavy legacy, when they regard her from an opposite point of view. W. H. Vernon plays the chief male part—that of Sir Martin Ingoldsby, a gentleman who left England when a young man to seek his fortune in Australia, and was knighted for public munificence. He had committed a felony when young and had destroyed the happiness of a young girl, Margaret Harvey, whom he subsequently believed to be dead, but who turns up in the Hon. Mrs. Motteville. She suspects his identity, meeting him at the house of her brother, Lord Motteville, whose daughter he proposes to marry. The match is most favorably regarded by Lord Motteville, whose affairs are in a condition which require immediate pecuniary support. The Hon. Mrs. Motteville prevents Sir Martin's marriage to the young lady, who loves a penniless officer in the Guards. She is about to denounce him to the guests, when he draws a pistol to blow out his brains. She arrests his hand with a cry of terror, and then explains to the guests, who hasten in, that her agitation was only caused by her recognition in the person of Sir Martin of an old friend whom she believed to be dead. The curtain falls as she tells him, in faltering accents, of her forgiveness. Although the interest of the play scarcely sustained the promise of the first act, it commanded earnest attention from a large audience."

"Formosa,"

a drama in four acts, by Auguste Vacquerie, was produced March 16 at the Odeon, Paris. The piece is a literary effort of serious pretensions. It abounds in fine verses, and the scenes are handled in the most masterly manner. It elicited continuous applause throughout the evening, but the succeeding representations may not be signaled by as much enthusiasm. The drama of M. Vacquerie is severe, and written rather for perusal than for the stage. The incontestible beauties that are to be found in it are not those which make an impression upon the crowd. The audience March 16 was an unusually brilliant one, and comprised nearly all the literary celebrities, including Victor Hugo, accompanied by his grandchildren

AN AMERICAN LADY'S DEBUT.

MISS WOODHALL made her first appearance before a London audience at the Savoy Theatre March 16 (matinee) in "The Palace of Truth." A cablegram says: "Miss Woodhall, who is believed to be an American lady desirous of putting her histronic ambition to public test, failed to impress the audience as Princess Leolide, a part which requires high emotional and declamatory powers."

SCINTILLATIONS.

WILLIAM CRESWICK is to direct the Shakespearian Festival at Stratford-on-Avon, commencing April 16 and lasting twelve nights. Mr. C. is to play eight nights, and is to act Falstaff for the first time in England.

THE LYCEUM THEATRE, London, is to be closed from March 19 till 24.

MARIE FECHTER and Henri Porcé were married Feb. 26 in the Church of Saint Louis d'Antin, Paris. A grand dinner and a ball followed the ceremony, both being numerously attended.

A BOY'S OPINION OF A PROFESSIONAL MATINEE.—As the cabs were drawing up to the doors of the Princess' Theatre, London, in the afternoon of Feb. 27, when a professional matinee of "The Silver King" was given, one boy exclaimed to another: "I say, Bill, what's going on?" "Why," responded Bill, "did you ever know such jolly foolery? Blessed if one lot of actors aint going to play to another lot."

"NANCE OLDFIELD" was revived by Genevieve Ward at the Olympic Theatre, London, at the matinee Feb. 24. It was written by Charles Reade, and produced about thirty years ago under the title of "Art." Its theme is like that of "David Garrick."

FIRE.—The Victoria Music-hall, Grimsby, Eng., was totally destroyed by fire Feb. 25. Loss £5,000, covered by insurance. A fire was discovered in the gallery of the Theatre Royal there 27, but it was extinguished.

A VINDICTIVE CAMEL.—A serious accident occurred Feb. 16 at the Plymouth (Eng.) Theatre, where the pantomime of "Robinson Crusoe" was being performed. In one scene a camel is introduced, and the keeper, Wm. White, having in the course of the performance struck the animal across the legs while it was attempting to rise, the camel suddenly knelt on him, and remained in this position until another of the supernumeraries came to White's rescue. It was then found that, besides having sustained other less serious injuries, his thigh was broken. He was at once removed to the hospital.

A THEATRE is in course of construction in Berlin which is to consist entirely of iron. It is to cost only £6,000, and will be devoted entirely to the performance of French operettas.

JOHN M. TURNER, American banjoist, was playing with Sam Hague's Minstrels in St. James' Hall, Liverpool.

MRS. HUDSON KIRBY is playing Mother Shipton with a traveling "Romany Rye" Co. in England.

CHIARINI'S CIRCUS was in Penang in January last.

WILSON BARRETT gave a professional matinee of "The Silver King" in the afternoon of Feb. 27 in the Princess' Theatre, London. Over two thousand ladies and gentlemen of every grade in the profession, including banner-bearers, scenic-artists, scene-shifters, etc., crowded the theatre from floor to ceiling. A special programme, in the shape of a double card bound in pale pink silk, with a tassel and border, had been prepared for the ladies; and between the acts tea, coffee and light refreshments were served to visitors in the saloon and other rooms set apart for the purpose. At the close of the performance Mr. Barrett addressed the audience, saying: "Ladies and gentlemen: I think I may say brothers and sisters in an art which we all love, or perhaps members of a profession receiving such ridiculously small salaries (I hope they won't hear this on the other side of the curtain), I thank you very heartily for your attendance here this afternoon. I hope such gatherings as these will become more frequent. We can all learn something from the humblest of our craft, even if we learn what to avoid. I am afraid many of you have been very uncomfortable, standing so long a time; but that is the fault of the capacity of the theatre. If it were as large as my welcome, it should contain all comers."

A RADICAL CHANGE.—A bill for the better regulation of theatres and other places of public entertainment in London has been brought into the House of Commons. It is very short, consisting of but five clauses, of which the first repeals former acts save as provides for the existing censorship of plays by the Lord-chamberlain. The second places the regulation of all places of amusement under the department of the Home-secretary, who is to frame such regulations for them as he may deem necessary for the establishment of decency and order in such places of amusement, and to insure the safety and accommodation of the public. The Secretary of State is to appoint a sufficient number of fit persons to be inspectors, who will survey and report to him as to the manner in which such regulations are observed, and also as regards the stability of structure, due security against fire and facilities of ingress and egress. A fourth clause fixes a maximum penalty of £20, and £5 per day for omitting to carry out the notice of the Home-secretary or for acting contrary to the regulations; and the fifth provides for the recovery of fines under the Summary Jurisdiction Act, and allows an appeal.

KATE MUNROE has been engaged for the New Royalty Theatre, London, to be opened in April.

CHARLES READE has arranged to take the Olympic Theatre, London, for the Autumn season, when he will produce his drama "Singleheart and Doubleface."

R. B. CAVERLY will manage the American Opera Company known as "Atkinson's Jollities," which will arrive in Liverpool about the middle of May.

MISS LOUISE VESSALIUS, a young American lady, is to appear at the Strand, London, on Easter Monday in the new opera-bouffe "Gambia, or the Magic Thimble."

ALICE DUNNING LINGARD was to have repeated Camille at the Gaiety, London, March 13, matinee.

A NEW AND ORIGINAL DRAMA in four acts, by A. W. Pinero, it is said, will follow "Comrades" at the Court Theatre, London.

THE GLOBE, London, it is reported, will be opened at Easter by J. S. Clarke.

MISS BATEMAN'S COMPANY are busy rehearsing R. Palgrave's new drama "Shadow and Sunshine."

FOREIGN SHOW NEWS.

NOVELTIES.

"Storm-beaten,"

a drama in a prologue and five acts, by Robert Buchanan, founded on his romance of "God and the Man," was produced in the Adelphi Theatre, London, Eng., March 14. A cable-message to The Telegram says:

"Its strong cast and elaborate scenic effects, added to its story of thrilling interest, combined to make the first performance exceptionally interesting. It attracted a large and brilliant audience, who extended an enthusiastic welcome to it. Hate and vengeance form the purpose of the play, which is mellowed by the wholesome moral of the impotence of human revenge. The hate in question exists between two families, and has been handed down for years from father to son on both sides. In the prologue the cause of the hatred is forcibly depicted. The bullying Squire Orchardson forecloses a mortgage on the farm belonging to the widow of an old tenant, Farmer Christianson. The pitiless act of the Squire is aggravated by his expression of pleasure when he sees the family begging for bread. The widow swears Kate to vengeance, and this brings the prologue to a close. The first act opens on the May-day revels. Richard Orchardson and Christian Christianson become unconsciously worse enemies than the wildest dreams of their forefathers could have foretold. Both love Priscilla Sefton, the daughter of a blind Wesleyan Methodist preacher. Unknown to either Christian or his mother, who dies of a broken heart, Richard has secretly loved Kate Christianson, whom he has betrayed under a promise of marriage. The charming scene of the crowning of the May-queen is here introduced, with a pastoral ballet and the May-pole brought in. By a grim satire of fate, Kate, who had been cast aside by her faithless lover in favor of Priscilla, is crowned queen. The story of the heartless betrayal is divulged to Christian by Priscilla, who has been Kate's confidant. The name of the betrayer, however, is not disclosed. This leads to the second act, where Sefton, who has been the guest of the Squire, is on the eve of going on a sea voyage for the benefit of his health, accompanied by his daughter. The Squire, learning that the preacher is rich, urges his son to press his suit, ultimately deciding that Richard should take passage on the same ship as the Seftons. This intention on the part of Richard coming to the ears of Kate, who has given birth to a child, she implores him to keep his promise and not forsake her. Ruthlessly flinging her aside, he flees, leaving Kate in a swoon, in which state she is found by Christian, who learns for the first time that his sister's betrayer is his old, hated rival. At this point the play is intensely dramatic and effective. With hand uplifted to heaven, Christian calls upon God to deliver into his hands the villain who wrought so much sorrow and calamity in his family. This curse, delivered with desperate earnestness, mingled with the hysterical shrieks of Kate, who apprehends the possible dreadful fate of the man she loves, is the most powerful situation in the piece, and brings down the curtain on the second act amid loud and ringing cheers. The third act introduces Priscilla on the deck of the Miles Standish, Richard earnestly pressing his suit and blackening his rival's character. A sailor, who has closely observed the whole scene, suddenly throws off his disguise and reveals Christian. He instantly flies at the throat of his enemy, but is put in irons for insubordination. Priscilla now knows the infamy of the man who followed her, and declares before him her love for Christian. Richard determines to take the life of his rival by burning the part of the ship in which he is confined. A fine scenic effect is now brought to the support of the play, representing the ship on fire. Christian is rescued from the hold just as the vessel strikes an iceberg, which enfolds her in huge masses of ice and crushes her. Amid the crash of falling masts and splitting timbers the two enemies are seen on an ice-floe locked in a deadly embrace, each endeavoring to force the other under the water. Richard is struggling in the midst of the broken ice as the curtain falls. The weakest portion of the play commences in the fourth act. The incidents are undramatic, tedious and painful. Two hungry and gaunt men are seen to meet each other on a desolate, sterile island. These are Richard and Christian, who have miraculously escaped death from drowning. Christian, seeing the man he hates doomed to die of starvation, cannot deny himself the pleasure of gloating over the sufferings of his enemy. This desire is reversed when Richard is at the point of death. Then Christian implores Heaven to save his life on the ground of loneliness. Scarcely has the prayer been uttered when the sound of cannon is heard and a boat appears. No one knows whether it rescues both or not. The curtain rises on the last act to the sound of the church-bells ringing an Easter peal. The villagers, with the old Squire bringing up the rear, enter the church to celebrate Easter-day. Two ladies dressed in deep mourning are seen standing at the door of a cottage opposite. A stranger, roughly clad, appears, evincing considerable emotion when he hears the singing of the Easter-hymn. He is addressed by one of the ladies, and immediately recognizes Kate. He then discloses himself as her brother. "Where is Richard?" fearfully asks Kate, at the same time recoiling from the embrace of the man she fears is her lover's murderer. The answer to her question is the immediate entrance of Richard, sound and hearty. He tells her how her brother saved his life and promised to amend the past by redeeming his promise of marrying her. Christian then folds Priscilla in his arms, and love is established on all sides, while guilt is, to the detriment of the piece, too easily condoned. So the curtain finally falls on a most unnatural and improbable termination of the story. Such a quarrel should only end—as it does in the novel—in the death of one, instead of both returning as boon companions to the home of their childhood, apparently without the shadow of the memory of the wretched past. All the actors did their best. Mr. Warner was especially energetic. The scenery was admirable, and the painter, Mr. Beverly, was summoned to receive hearty applause after the ice-scene. The author was also called at the close of the play, which is likely to have a long run, being fully up to the standard of Adelphi melodramas.

"NAMESAKES," a farce written by Horace Lennard, was produced at the Gaiety Theatre, London, Feb. 24 (matinee), and was favorably received.

"PITY," a pathetic drama in one act, by Arthur Shirley, was originally acted at the Crystal Palace, London, Feb. 27 (matinee), and met with success. It is an adaptation of "Gringoire," first brought out in Paris in 1866.

"L'As de Trefle"

(The Ace of Clubs), a drama in five acts, by M. Pierre Decourcelle, was produced at the Ambigu, Paris, March 15, and, says a cablegram, "was a complete success. The author is a young man only twenty-five years of age. The piece is written in the style of the old melodramas, modernized and full of Parisian details amusing and picturesque. It abounds in improbabilities, but they are ingeniously worked out and interest the audience. The piece possesses two great elements of success—an admirable mise en scene and a remarkable interpretation. Sarah Bernhardt superintended the production of the piece, and the evidences of her taste and judgment were to be detected in the slightest details. The drama is likely to have a long and successful run at the Ambigu.

The story is concerned with the adventures of Dr. Marcel Bernier, who is accused of the murder of Julia D'Amberval, a woman of loose reputation, by M. Roberts, a member of the secret police. The arrest takes place in the presence of his betrothed, who is driven almost to despair. Marcel, however, keeps cool, and asks to be allowed an interview with the young lady. As soon as they are alone he says to his betrothed, giving her a sealed packet: "My dear Jeanne, this letter was given me by my mother, who told me to send it to the person to whom it is addressed if ever I should happen to be in danger. Take it and see that it reaches its destination." Jeanne looks at the envelope and sees that it is addressed to M. Roberts. Hearing his name uttered by the young lady, Roberts takes the letter from her and opens it, "Merciful God!" he cries. The man whom he has been doing his best to ruin, Marcel Bernier, is his own son. From that moment Roberts ceases to have any doubt of Bernier's innocence, and sets to work to track the real criminals. How can he discover them? He has but a single clue to their identity—a card, the ace of clubs, which the dead woman had on her person when she died. At first the police had attached very little importance to this card, for at the very moment she was struck down the victim was in the act of telling a fortune. On examining more carefully the pack of cards she had been using, however, they have found another ace of clubs, which, like the whole pack, has a blue back to it. Now, the card first picked up was white. It is, therefore, safe to conclude that the latter must have been let fall by one of the assassins, and all that is necessary to bring the crime home to the right person is to get hold of the rest of the white pack. Acting on this idea, Roberts starts on his mission full of hope, and a most exciting struggle begins between himself and the presumed murderers, whom he tracks first to a low drinking-place, then to a brasserie, and finally to the quay on the Seine at Auteuil, near the Pont du Jour. The assassins manage to "do for" several police-agents who accompany him, and Roberts himself is thrown into the Seine one night. Marcel Bernier would undoubtedly have been condemned to death, despite his father's self-sacrifice, if Nini Gendarme, hearing that Roberts had been a benefactor to her family twenty years before these events, had not, obeying a sudden impulse, confessed the truth. The real criminals are punished, Marcel Bernier is restored to liberty, Jeannie de Croix-Vieux becomes his wife, and M. Roberts leaves the police-force.

"A Great Catch,"

a new three-act comedy of modern manners, by Hamilton Aide, was produced at the Olympic, London, March 17 (matinee) by Miss Genevieve Ward, in aid of the School of Dramatic Art. A cablegram to The Herald says: "Miss Ward sustains the principal role—that of the Hon. Mrs. De Motteville, the poor relative of an aristocratic family, who neglect and insult her till she suddenly receives a heavy legacy, when they regard her from an opposite point of view. W. H. Vernon plays the chief male part—that of Sir Martin Ingoldsby, a gentleman who left England when a young man to seek his fortune in Australia, and was knighted for public munificence. He had committed a felony when young and had destroyed the happiness of a young girl, Margaret Harvey, whom he subsequently believed to be dead, but who turns up in the Hon. Mrs. Motteville. She suspects his identity, meeting him at the house of her brother, Lord Motteville, whose daughter he proposes to marry. The match is most favorably regarded by Lord Motteville, whose affairs are in a condition which require immediate pecuniary support. The Hon. Mrs. Motteville prevents Sir Martin's marriage to the young lady, who loves a penniless officer in the Guards. She is about to denounce him to the guests, when he draws a pistol to blow out his brains. She arrests his hand with a cry of terror, and then explains to the guests, who hasten in, that her agitation was only caused by her recognition in the person of Sir Martin of an old friend whom she believed to be dead. The curtain falls as she tells him, in faltering accents, of her forgiveness. Although the interest of the play scarcely sustained the promise of the first act, it commanded earnest attention from a large audience."

"Formosa,"

a drama in four acts, by Auguste Vacquerie, was produced March 16 at the Odeon, Paris. The piece is a literary effort of serious pretensions. It abounds in fine verses, and the scenes are handled in the most masterly manner. It elicited continuous applause throughout the evening, but the succeeding representations may not be signaled by as much enthusiasm. The drama of M. Vacquerie is severe, and written rather for perusal than for the stage. The incontestible beauties that are to be found in it are not those which make an impression upon the crowd. The audience March 16 was an unusually brilliant one, and comprised nearly all the literary celebrities, including Victor Hugo, accompanied by his grandchildren

AN AMERICAN LADY'S DEBUT.

MISS WOODHALL made her first appearance before a London audience at the Savoy Theatre March 16 (matinee) in "The Palace of Truth." A cablegram says: "Miss Woodhall, who is believed to be an American lady desirous of putting her histronic ambition to public test, failed to impress the audience as Princess Leolide, a part which requires high emotional and declamatory powers."

SCINTILLATIONS.

WILLIAM CRESWICK is to direct the Shakespearian Festival at Stratford-on-Avon, commencing April 16 and lasting twelve nights. Mr. C. is to play eight nights, and is to act Falstaff for the first time in England.

THE LYCEUM THEATRE, London, is to be closed from March 19 till 24.

MARIE FECHTER and Henri Porce were married Feb. 26 in the Church of Saint Louis d'Antin, Paris. A grand dinner and a ball followed the ceremony, both being numerously attended.

A BOY'S OPINION OF A PROFESSIONAL MATINEE.—As the cabs were drawing up to the doors of the Princess' Theatre, London, in the afternoon of Feb. 27, when a professional matinee of "The Silver King" was given, one boy exclaimed to another: "I say, Bill, what's going on?" "Why," responded Bill, "did you ever know such jolly foolery? Blessed if one lot of actors aint going to play to another lot."

"NANCE OLDFIELD" was revived by Genevieve Ward at the Olympic Theatre, London, at the matinee Feb. 24. It was written by Charles Reade, and produced about thirty years ago under the title of "Art." Its theme is like that of "David Garrick."

FIRE.—The Victoria Music-hall, Grimsby, Eng., was totally destroyed by fire Feb. 25. Loss £5,000, covered by insurance. A fire was discovered in the gallery of the Theatre Royal there 27, but it was extinguished.

A VINDICTIVE CAMEL.—A serious accident occurred Feb. 16 at the Plymouth (Eng.) Theatre, where the pantomime of "Robinson Crusoe" was being performed. In one scene a camel is introduced, and the keeper, Wm. White, having in the course of the performance struck the animal across the legs while it was attempting to rise, the camel suddenly knelt on him, and remained in this position until another of the supernumeraries came to White's rescue. It was then found that, besides having sustained other less serious injuries, his thigh was broken. He was at once removed to the hospital.

A THEATRE is in course of construction in Berlin which is to consist entirely of iron. It is to cost only £6,000, and will be devoted entirely to the performance of French operettas.

JOHN M. TURNER, American banjoist, was playing with Sam Hague's Minstrels in St. James' Hall, Liverpool.

MRS. HUDSON KIRBY is playing Mother Shipton with a traveling "Romany Rye" Co. in England.

CHIARINI'S CIRCUS was in Penang in January last.

WILSON BARRETT gave a professional matinee of "The Silver King" in the afternoon of Feb. 27 in the Princess' Theatre, London. Over two thousand ladies and gentlemen of every grade in the profession, including banner-bearers, scenic-artists, scene-shifters, etc., crowded the theatre from floor to ceiling. A special programme, in the shape of a double card bound in pale pink silk, with a tassel and border, had been prepared for the ladies; and between the acts tea, coffee and light refreshments were served to visitors in the saloon and other rooms set apart for the purpose. At the close of the performance Mr. Barrett addressed the audience, saying: "Ladies and gentlemen: I think I may say brothers and sisters in an art which we all love, or perhaps members of a profession receiving such ridiculously small salaries (I hope they won't hear this on the other side of the curtain), I thank you very heartily for your attendance here this afternoon. I hope such gatherings as these will become more frequent. We can all learn something from the humblest of our craft, even if we learn what to avoid. I am afraid many of you have been very uncomfortable, standing so long a time; but that is the fault of the capacity of the theatre. If it were as large as my welcome, it should contain all comers."

A RADICAL CHANGE.—A bill for the better regulation of theatres and other places of public entertainment in London has been brought into the House of Commons. It is very short, consisting of but five clauses, of which the first repeals former acts save as provides for the existing censorship of plays by the Lord-chamberlain. The second places the regulation of all places of amusement under the department of the Home-secretary, who is to frame such regulations for them as he may deem necessary for the establishment of decency and order in such places of amusement, and to insure the safety and accommodation of the public. The Secretary of State is to appoint a sufficient number of fit persons to be inspectors, who will survey and report to him as to the manner in which such regulations are observed, and also as regards the stability of structure, due security against fire and facilities of ingress and egress. A fourth clause fixes a maximum penalty of £20, and £5 per day for omitting to carry out the notice of the Home-secretary or for acting contrary to the regulations; and the fifth provides for the recovery of fines under the Summary Jurisdiction Act, and allows an appeal.

KATE MUNROE has been engaged for the New Royalty Theatre, London, to be opened in April.

MISS LOUISE VESSALIUS, a young American lady, is to appear at the Strand, London, on Easter Monday in the new opera-bouffe "Gambia, or the Magic Thimble."

ALICE DUNNING LINGARD was to have repeated Camille at the Gaiety, London, March 13, matinee.
